WARD SUED FOR $50,000 IN DEATH OF PETERS

MR. AND MRS. ELDRIDGE PETERS

Parents of Clarence S. Peters, Haverhill youth of whose murder Walter S. Ward, New York millionaire, was recently found not guilty. They have filed a $50,000 damage suit against Ward as a result of their son's death.

Haverhill, Nov. 26.—As an aftermath of the Ward blackmail and murder mystery, a suit for $50,000 will be instituted against Walter S. Ward, son of the New York bread king, who is alleged to have shot Clarence M. Peters, by the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge Peters of this city.

Ward was tried and acquitted of the murder of the Haverhill boy, but the facts behind the death still remain hidden.

The suit will be filed in the United States District Court in New York City, Wednesday. Attorney Frederick H. Magison, counsel for the Peters, will leave for New York Tuesday night to confer with Attorney

SUPER SET PICKS UP ENGLAND

Quincy Man Gets London Broadcast on Loud Speaker With Super-Neutrodyne

The Boston American's super-neutradyne passed the supreme test last night, when one of the sets picked up London on a loud speaker during the tests.

The set was made and operated by K. S. Herrington of No. 43 Avalon street, Quincy.

Here is Herrington's dramatic story of the trans-Atlantic reception:

"Last night, with my wife, I was listening on on the concert of the Kansas City Star, WDAF, on 411 meters.

"During a quiet period I heard the following words very clearly on the loud speaker, spoken very rapidly:

"'Hello, Hello, Hello. London, British Isles. Stand by for a grand phone record.'

"Then for about ten seconds I heard some instrumental selection, then it faded and I lost it.

BURST OF CODE.

"I continued to search around the dial and finally I picked up the following:

"'Hello, Hello, Hello. London, British Isles. Stand by for a piano solo.'

"Then came a burst of code like a ton of brick, and I lost the rest.

"My wife and I were spellbound when we first heard the word London, but we had presence of mind enough to look at the time. The first reception was at 10:23, and when the telegraphic interference drowned out the broadcast it was 10:36.

"The second reception was along about the wave length of WOR (Newark, N. J., 405 meters).

"Both were on the loud speaker as Mrs. Herrington will not use phones.

"I was doubtful about the American's superneutradyne at first, but it has proved itself to me."

IN HOUGH'S NECK.

Another Quincy listener who picked up London was H. E. Gill of No. 7 Winthrop place, Hough's Neck. Mr. Gill has the Westinghouse Radio. About 10:25 he heard:

"British Broadcasting Station. Hello, Hello, Hello."

There was something about a record and a little music before it faded

Mrs. Deeds paid for a casket, steel vault, a burial dress and the cost of digging the grave.

RUM KING AND $100,000 TAKEN IN SEA FIGHT

New York, Nov. 26.—Two hours before dawn, while a heavy haze hung over the sea, the United States rum navy stripped for action, and for the first time in history engaged in battle outside the international three-mile limit with an armed schooner flying the British flag.

As a result of the battle, "Rummy Bill" McCoy, whom government agents call the "King of the rum runners," today appeared before a United States commissioner with eight British seamen, crew of the schooner Tomako, charged with smuggling liquor inside the territorial waters of the United States.

When captured, McCoy had $60,000 on his person. The rest of the crew had $40,000 between them.

The fight began while darkness still hung over the sea.

Across the waters came this message megaphoned from the poop of the two-masted auxiliary schooner Tomako:

"I'll see you in —— before you'll

DEMPSEY TO FIGHT WILLS

Will Retire and Wed After Three Bouts in 1924, He Says

By MARK KELLEY

Copyright, 1923, by Universal Service.

Los Angeles, Nov. 26.—Jack Dempsey, champion heavyweight pugilist, will quit the ring after three more fights. He hopes to crowd these fights into the next twelve months and to be ready to retire undefeated on January 1, 1925.

Once actually out of the game, Dempsey says he never will return. As a guaranty against such temptation he plans to marry, settle in Los Angeles, and go into the real estate business with his manager and partner, Jack Kearns.

Jack Dempsey

Dempsey told this without frills or qualifications to the writer. He was packing up in preparation for a trip to Lower California for a few days' hunting between business deals attendant to his quick get away.

At the conclusion of the hunting trip Dempsey intends to join Kearns in New York, sign articles for three fights for 1924, and then in a few exhibition bout throughout the Atlantic States.

Dempsey doesn't know whom he will fight the coming year, but he has withdrawn his pledge never to box Willie, and the New Orleans pair they will get his chances at the title as quickly as the articles can be signed, a purse agreed upon, and an arena built in New York capable to house the throng that will flock to see such a fight.

Luis Firpo, South American heavyweight, who lost to Dempsey in two rounds, only after one of the most sensational battles in the history of the fight game, will be taken on again about July 4.

Then Tommy Gibbons will get his second shot at Dempsey.

The champion hopes to polish off all three challengers with dispatch and step down and off the throne

TURKEYS 45 CENTS IN HUB PRICE WAR

As a result of the campaign of the John T. Connor Company to furnish their customers with reasonably priced turkeys for Thanksgiving, the company has been threatened with lawsuits by 90 per cent. of the landlords of the company's 425 stores in New England.

The company is selling turkeys for 45 cents a pound at retail.

The basis for the threatened lawsuits is that the John T. Connor Company has no right to sell turkeys in stores leased to them for a grocery business, according to President Charles F. Adams of the company, and to the fact that provisions in buildings in which his company has stores have leases providing that they shall be the only dealers in these buildings who shall sell meats and poultry.

"We are going to continue to sell turkeys, just the same," said Mr. Adams today. "Not only are we going to sell turkeys, but we are going to extend the co-operative idea of putting all kinds of foodstuffs into the hands of the consumer with only one profit and one handling charge between the producer and the consumer.

"We encountered the same threats and the same opposition when we broke the price of milk two years ago. Eventually we intend to put all kinds of staples in the hands of the people on the same basis."

According to Mr. Adams, the company sent buyers into Vermont, Illinois, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Texas and Kentucky, "shopping for turkeys." They buyers encountered difficulty in getting the grades of birds they wanted, but eventually closed with Kentucky turkey ranches for approximately 275,000 young

WANTED IN DEATH OF VETERAN

Dr. Sutcliffe, Accused in Fatal Operation, Ready to Tell His Story to Jury

By BERT FORD

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 26.—The grand jury carrying on the "diploma mill" investigation expected to have "Dr." George Sutcliffe of Unionville, Conn., who has been sought in the roundup of quack doctors, available for examination today.

Sutcliffe, who had promised to come here from Toronto to tell his story to the jury, was located today at a local hotel, where he is staying with his brother-in-law, H. M. Dubbs, of Albany.

He declined to meet newspaper men. There was no guard at the hotel, and Sutcliffe was free to go about as he pleased.

Sutcliffe is alleged to have confessed to buying a medical diploma and a Connecticut license. He is wanted for manslaughter in connection with the death of seven of his patients in the first seven months of his practice at Unionville. He became known as the "Butcher" after testimony that he had killed a patient by over-etherizing him.

He will be called upon to testify at the probe of the Grand Jury con-

HAVERHILL MAN, STABBED, DYING

Haverhill, Nov. 26.—Thomas Noonan of No. 57 Sixth avenue, this city, is dying at the Gale Hospital with three knife wounds in his stomach received in a fight at Bartlett and Washington streets.

Noonan refuses to tell who stabbed him or with whom he was fighting, nor will he tell what the fight was about.

In a cell at police headquarters is Ernest Frietta, a companion of Noonan. Frietta was arrested on a charge of drunkenness. Frietta admits there was a fight, and that he was in it, but he says he fought on the side of Noonan and that he was handed a knockout blow during the mixup. He also refuses to tell what the fight was about or with whom he and Noonan were fighting.

NEW HAVEN ROAD TO LAY OFF 1000 MEN IN REPAIR SHOPS

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 26.—While officials of the New Haven Road would not deny reports current throughout the State that there would be a layoff in the car departments affecting over 1,000 men, Clinton L. Bardo, general manager of the railroad, declared that there will be a reduction of forces if there has not been one already. The layoff will affect employes engaged in the repair and maintenance of box cars because of a surplus supply of cars now on hand. Mr. Bardo indicated that the Keith Car Company of Sagamore, Mass., which is under contract to deliver 100 repaired cars each week, would not be affected by the layoff. The reports stated that the layoff would affect 400 men in this city, 700 in Readville, Mass., and 500 in the shops at East Hartford, Ct. It was intimated that the layoff would last until January 2.

HOLIDAY BOOZE KILLS 12; MANY OTHERS SERIOUSLY ILL

Philadelphia, Nov. 26.—Liquor "imported" for the holiday season caused the deaths of twelve men, according to the police, and sent many others to hospitals in a critical condition. The deaths increased the fatalities attributed by the authorities to poison whiskey to eight in the last seven days.

Five persons died of poisoned booze in this city.

Central city hospitals treated scores of persons who had been picked up on the streets unconscious from whiskey which some of them said had been sold to them by bootleggers as "imported." Many said they had taken but one or two drinks of the liquor before losing consciousness.

Two automobile accidents were reported today, one of which will probably prove fatal, following a string of Sunday accidents, in which several fatalities occurred. John Anderson is thought to be dying at Cambridge City Hospital.

He was struck near his home on Charles River road today, and his companion escaped a similar fate when he leaped away from the swiftly moving car as it went past. The driver sped away.

Three persons were thrown from an automobile when their machine crashed head-on into a freight train at the Albany street crossing in Cambridge today. The machine was operated by Otto Gautreau of New Bedford. The others in the car were Miss Josephine Collins of Whitman street, Somerville, and Wilfred Dwight of New Bedford.

The automobile rolled over twice under the impact and came to rest on the sidewalk. None of those

33 KNOTS ON THE SURFACE, NEW BRITISH SUB'S SPEED

London, Nov. 26.—A submarine which is nearing completion at a Chatham dockyard for the British navy, will be the longest as well as the fastest in the world, according to the Morning Post.

She will have a surface speed of 33 knots, thus enabling her to accompany battleships when steaming at full speed. The submarine will carry six 6-10-inch guns, an armament said to be unique for an undersea craft.

take my boat, outside the three-mile limit."

Leaning over the bridge rail of the Seneca, a United States Coast Guard officer shouted back:

"You'll go to ——— yourself if you start something."

BOARDERS REPELLED.

Fifteen minutes later, after a boarding party from another government vessel had been thrown off the deck of the Tomaka by its crew, the Seneca's siren sounded, calling "strip for action."

One moment more, and as the three-inch batteries of the Seneca were laid on the retreating schooner, came the order from the bridge.

"Fire at will!"

[illegible] he starboard [illegible]ricked [illegible]

[illegible] across the Tomaka's bow. From the British-er came shouts of defiance and a machine gun was seen being unlimbered.

Again the Seneca fired. The machine gun on the Tomaka—only a quarter mile away—now was in battery.

The siren on the Seneca sounded once more directing "Increase your fire."

SCHOONER GIVES UP.

Again and again and again the guns of the Seneca roared. Before the Tomaka's machine could be got into action, however, it was decided that discretion was the better part of valor, and the British flag was slowly hauled down from the schooner's mastnead. The vessel put about and a boarding party reached the deck just as one machine gun was being tossed overboard. A second one was seized.

A crew of nine men, sullen and defiant, with the marks of physical combat on their faces, stood sullen and defiant as the government officers formally seized the vessel and cargo.

HEAD OF RING.

Crouching in the hold of the Tomaka, partly hidden by sacks filled with liquor bottles, was a man clad in garments which spoke more of Fifth avenue than the quarter deck. When hauled to the deck he arrogantly stepped to one side and sneered at his captors.

"You're a — of a bunch of ——," He was William S. McCoy, for whom Federal authorities have been searching for five months up and down the Atlantic coast. He has been credited with being the brains of a gigantic syndicate backed by a powerful group of millionaires who also are flooding America with liquor.

A total of 200 cases of rare old whiskey was stowed away in the hold of the vessel. Papers indicated that the vessel had 4,200 cases when it sailed from Nassau.

Ten days ago Howard Estabrook, special agent of the Treasury Department in New York, received a mysterious message from Nassau, the Bahamas, which read:

"McCoy — Tomaka — Seabright — 4,200."

Estabrook correctly interpreted that to mean that McCoy, against whom indictments in the Federal Court are said to be pending in New Jersey—was sending toward Seabright, N. J., in the Tomaka with 4,000 cases of whiskey.

AN OLD OFFENDER.

The Tomaka is an old offender, well known in the rum davy. Formerly she was called the Arachuan and gained the reputation of being the most elusive vessel among the liquor carriers.

Estabrook calculated that the Tomaka would reache Seabright somewhere about midnight. The coast guard cutter Seneca, instructed to keep an eye open for her, was cruising off Seabright three hours before dawn when the Tomaka was sighted.

As radiograms went to the United States Customs Tug Lexington, then cruising off Staten Island, to join the attack on the Britisher, the Lexington responded instantly.

Str. Portland Lost With 150 Lives 25 Years Ago

The week-end deluge recalled the great blizzard of November 26-27 of twenty-five years ago when the steamer Portland was lost with about 150 souls aboard, wreckage coming ashore on Cape Cod.

Other weather milestones of this part of November are the "lighthouse gale" of 1851, when the great tide in years toppled over the iron lighthouse structure on Minot's Ledge, and the sleet storm of 1921, with its freezing rain, which wrought millions of dollars of damage on shore and wrenched a lightship from her moorings off Cape Cod.

The Tomaka lay at anchor while a boarding party from the Lexington went aboard her. The crew of the rum-runner stood quietly until the last prohibition agent had set foot on board.

"At 'em."

At that command the Tomaka's crew leaped on the Americans and literally beat them back into their boat. As the last American fell over the Tomaka's side, a jeer went up.

The Americans had been routed—but it was two to one.

Fifteen minutes later when the Seneca's batteries went into action, throwing shells over the Tomaka's bow, the Britishers changed their tune.

MEN TAKEN OFF.

The master of the Tomaka was George Downey, and his crew gave Nassau and Nova Scotia addresses. The men were taken to the barge office, where they were held to be questioned by Edward H. Harnes, assistant solicitor of the port, prior to their being sent before one of the United States Commissioners in New Jersey.

The Tomaka is said to be the largest rum runner captured by American officials. She is 110 feet long, with broad beam and spacious holds. The vessel is believed to have been flagship of a flotilla of Christmas liquor runners which are known to be lying off the American coast.

cerning the purchase of his licenses. The confession concerning the purchase of these papers was made to Governor Templeton and State's Attorney Alcorn.

Governor Templeton and Prosecutor Alcorn returned today from Washington where it is believed they sought Federal aid in a nation-wide drive on quack doctors. The request for Federal aid is the result of the report of Dr. Stanley H. Osborn, State Health Department head, appointed to scan the records for suspicious death certificates, announced that several thousand deaths all over the country could be concerned in the investigation.

BAY STATE PROBE

Dr. Fred H. Works, assistant surgeon of the United States Veterans' Hospital, West Roxbury, Mass., sought by the police in connection with the roundup of alleged fake doctors in Connecticut, is believed to be in Stonington, Ct., on a leave of absence. He has a practice at the latter place.

Representative of the Massachusetts Board of Registration in Medicine arrived here today to confer with the Connecticut authorities who are smoking out quack doctors.

They are to check up with the Connecticut officials in order to ascertain to what extent the medical profession of the Bay State has been corrupted by the diploma mill sinners.

The Grand Jury extraordinary resumed its deliberations today at the County Building. Professor William P. Sachs, ex-Lutheran minister and former State examiner of schools for Missouri, who has confessed to the part he played in the Sutcliffe diplomas and credits conspiracy, was expected to tell his story to the Grand Jury today.

LETTERS SEIZED

The mass of documentary evidence held by the Grand Jury most of which was seized in raids on fake medical schools in Missouri, includes correspondence between the Western diploma pedlars and medical officials in Connecticut.

Some letters in evidence were written on stationery of the Connecticut Eclectic Medical Society and bear the signature of Dr. James A. Christian, recently ousted as secretary of the society. The Christian letters were among a quantity of correspondence seized in the home of Dr. Robert Adcox in St. Louis, known as the "clearing house agent" for the ring.

One of the Christian letters was addressed to Dr. Ehrich von Brundenstein of Chero, Texas, and was forwarded registered mail, by von Brandenstein to Dr. Adcox. The letter, dated June 18, 1923, reads:

"As secretary of the Connecticut Eclectic Medical Association I am writing you to ask you to please send in your share of the past Legislature.

BARED SLUSH FUND

"One bill was killed, one passed by the House and Senate, but has not been signed by the Governor and I do not think it will be.

"Hoping to have an early remittance by you, giving this matter your personal attention and remitting your check, we can straighten this matter out without delay."

Another letter written by Dr. Christian to the Texas man read:

"If you value your license you had better get in touch with me and make arrangements to meet expenses to save your license, also your reputation."

It was this letter that led to discovery of a "slush fund" used to support measures before the Legislature of Connecticut.

A letter signed "6414," the number of Dr. Adcox's residence on Delmar avenue, St. Louis, interested Connecticut probers. It was Adcox's reply to a branch agent. It reads:

"Enclosed please find the '4' properly executed, and I got a fine boiling out for the fees I paid him, but I made a nice contribution to his campaign fund and his election was only April 3rd and I went back at him and said, 'You may want to run again when these four years are out, as I have helped you twice now,' and he said, 'Send me any business you have but get my price if you POSSIBLY can.' He is all right after all as you can see. His wife is the good fellow.

RUSH ORDER

A hurry call for diplomas is shown in the following letter among the exhibits, which reads in part:

"Kindly rush them through. The sooner the better. Don't worry, the Board of Real Estate through which the papers are going to pass don't pay much attention to it as they also have to grant certain rights of way. One is for Jersey and the other is here. I am well acquainted with the Jersey man."

STEAMBOATS CRASH IN BALBOA HARBOR

Balboa, Panama, Nov. 26.—The steamer Nevania, from San Pedro, Saturday rammed the steamer Steel Engineer, bound from Philadelphia for Vancouver. The accident occurred in the outer harbor. The Steel Engineer will be repaired at Cristobal, but the Nevania, only slightly damaged, will be able to continue her voyage.

DEMPSEY READY TO BATTLE WILLS

for keeps with the reputation of the greatest heavyweight known to pugilism.

"I know that I can't go on fighting forever," Dempsey said. "The longer I delay embarking upon a business career that will be my life work, the more harm I do my future. I hope to take on three fights this year, clean up at least a million and a half dollars and quit undefeated.

REAL ESTATE BUSINESS

"I am very keen to get into business. This real estate game gives me a great kick. There is no city in the world so ripe for investment and quick returns as Los Angeles. The longer I put off my start in the business the harder it will be for me to get a foothold. Kearns feels as I do.

"I am 27 years old and know that I am in perfect physical trim. There may be five years of fight left in me, but I may get smacked over my next time out.

"It would be quite a distinction to be the first heavyweight to quit the ring undefeated. Jeffries did it and was coaxed back to fight Johnson.

"They'll never coax me back because I will be so tied up in business and making so much money that I won't be lured. Once a man passes 30 years he is not up to much in a ring. I am not silly enough to believe I will be any exception to this rule.

"I've had dozens of my friends call me 'Jumping Jack.' They say I am never content unless on the go continually. That's because I have nothing to tie me down. If I had a business, a home and wife I'd be content to settle down and stay here the rest of my days.

OWES IT TO PUBLIC

"The fight public has been mighty good to me. I owe it to that public to give every man a chance at my title. I believe there are only three men now who rate as contenders.

"It may be that within the year another dangerous contender may loom. If he comes along fast enough to get under the wire before I quit I'll take him on.

But regardless of how many contenders or how urgent the demand I will positively step out of the fighting ring within thirteen months.

"I've done a lot of kidding in my time, but this is strictly on the up and up, and it comes only after I have talked matters over with my mother, dad, Kearns and one or two persons whose judgment and advice always have guided me.

"I'll quit with plenty to take care of my needs and those of my people. I've got about $750,000 tied up in Los Angeles realty, and it pays me a neat return.

"With about that much more invested here I won't have to worry and shall have sufficient capital left to keep any bus going.

"It make 'no-never-mind' to me! this big Firpo will know how to finish a man that he hurts. It may be that time he won't get close enough to hurt me. Or it may be that this chap Willis is a tough baby. Perhaps Gibbons will do in New York what he failed to do in Shelby.

It make 'no never-mind' to me. I hope to quit undefeated, and believe I can repeat on Firpo and Gibbons and flatten Willis."

Then curtains on Jack Dempsey, the fighter and a smiling entrance for William H. Dempsey, real estate, loans and insurance."

'Abducted' Girl

ANTOINETTE LEGER
Twenty-year-old school teacher says she was abducted in an automobile by a rejected suitor.

TEACHER HELD 2 DAYS IN WOODS BY WOOER

Somerville, Ct., Nov. 26.—Miss Antoinette Leger, twenty-one-year-old school teacher of Little River, Mass., returned to her home here after an absence of four days, explaining that she had been abducted by a "wave-man" admirer and held a prisoner for thirty hours, without food or drink, while he pleaded with her to be married to him.

Incidentally, Miss Leger informed the authorities and her alarmed relatives, this was not the first time her "sheik" had abducted her in his big sport car and had persistently begged her to wed.

"I'm persistent wooer, Miss Leger declared, is Raymond Underwood, twenty-four years old, of Little River. His mother says he is now on his way to Canada to "try and forget."

WOOED FOUR YEARS.

Superintendent of Schools Chester D. Stiles of Westfield, Mass., who arrived here to make an investigation, heard the girl's story and announced he would allow the school committee to pass on the tale of the schoolmarm of Little River, which is in the environs of Westfield.

Miss Leger said she had known Underwood since she was thirteen years old and that he had been wooing her for four years. Last Tuesday she said she told him she is through with him forever.

"He had often taken me into the woods and made me stay there for hours and hours while he threatened and pleaded and tried to make me marry him," she said.

OUT ALL NIGHT BEFORE.

The teacher had been absent from her boarding house all night on several recent occasions and for four days over the last week-end.

Last Wednesday, Miss Leger said, the young man came to the schoolhouse and induced her to go for a ride with him, promising to bring her back in fifteen minutes. He drove her about a while, she said, and stopped in the woods. There, the girl continued, they remained for nearly two days and one night, while she refused to consent to his entreaties.

Finally, she yielded, she said, whereupon he drove her to Holyoke, Mass. She refused to marry him anywhere but in her own home town, and they continued to Somerville. There, she said, she escaped from the car and telephoned her relatives, who came and took her home.

GUNMEN CAPTURED WHEN BULLETS FLY

Pasquale Patpagello, thirty-nine years old, a laborer, No. 5 Smith street, Somerville, was arrested after a chase in which two shots were fired at him by Patrolman Henry W. Roche of the Somerville police.

Patpagello is charged with assault with intent to kill Charles Giumuido, twenty-eight years old, No. 3 Bedford street, Somerville, and with the illegal possession of firearms.

OPEN SHOP DECLARED BY CHICAGO BAND

Chicago, Nov. 26.—The Chicago Band, one of the best known civic musical organizations in the country, has declared for the "open shop." The action followed a controversy with the Chicago Federation of Musicians that had its beginning last September, when the band was fined $3,000 by the union because its director had criticized two union musicians, William Weil, conductor of the band, charged that the Federation sought to destroy the band because it is a civic organization and renders music at civic functions without pay.

$1,000,000 Willed to 'Perfect Girl' by 'Pauper'

This Jersey City girl of 21 inherits a fortune believed to be several hundred thousand dollars by the will of Louis Lehmeyer, a recluse of 92, who died in the charity ward of a hospital. Because of the friendship that existed between Lehmeyer and the girl's family the young woman was made heiress to the estate.

INDEMNITY FOR SLAIN OFFICER

Confiscation in Ruhr Follows Ultimatum Sent to Berlin Government

Brussels, Nov. 26.—The Belgian government today seized German rolling stock at Duisburg and Hamborn in view of Germany's failure to reply to Belgium's ultimatum demanding an indemnity of 1,250,000 francs for the assassination of Lieutenant Graff, near Dusseldorf, in March, 1923.

The time limit fixed by the Belgian Ultimatum expired last night. Belgium had previously rejected an offer from Germany to submit the question to The Hague Tribunal for arbitration, and the Berlin Government was notified that the amount claimed as indemnity would be confiscated in the occupied region should Germany fail to pay.

The shooting of Lieutenant Graff occurred while he was riding in a street car between Ruhrort and Walsum. His slayers, four members of the German Green Police, pleaded mistaken identity, declaring they believed the Lieutenant to be a Belgian they were seeking in order to avenge a German Police Officer whom he had killed.

Dr. Albert Forming "Bouncer Cabinet"

Berlin, Nov. 26 (I.N.S.).—The new German government, being formed today by Dr. Heinrich Albert, will most likely go down in history as the "Bouncer Cabinet." It stands little chance of being accepted by the Reichstag when introduced, probably tomorrow.

President Ebert is determined if the Albert ministery is rejected to dissolve parliament.

Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau is mentioned as probable foreign secretary. He was head of the German delegation at Paris who refused to sign the Versailles Treaty and returned his post rather than do so.

Dr. Albert, in the early years of the World War, was chief German propagandist and fiscal agent in the United States with offices in New York.

Two other statesmen had been asked to form a government to succeed the Stresemann ministry before Dr. Albert undertook the task. They are Herr von Kardorff and Herr Jarres.

Many Killed in Ruhr and Rhineland Riots

Berlin, Nov. 26 (Universal Cable).—Food riots in Ruhr and Rhineland cities were reported in messages reaching here telling of deaths, injuries and the plundering of shops and stores.

At Essen there were frequent clashes between the mobs bent on securing food and clothing from shops, and the police. Five persons were killed in as many hours and riots are continuing.

At Stopenberg, two deaths and five seriously wounded victims of food riots were reported.

RECLUSE DIES IN CHARITY COT; LEAVES RICHES

New York, Nov. 26.—Elizabeth Wurthman of Jersey City has become heiress to great wealth over night because she was a millionaire-pauper's romantic idea of a perfect girl.

That was the conclusion reached by the amazed and delighted friends of Elizabeth.

Miss Wurthman, twenty-one years old, lives in a common two-family house. The girl has been left the bulk of the fortune of Louis T. Lehmeyer, ninety-six years old, who died in the paupers' ward of the Metropolitan Hospital on Welfare Island.

SUPPOSED POOR.

Lehmeyer was supposed to be merely another case of a poor, deserted old man, dependent on public charity even for a hospital bed in which to die. His will made two staggering revelations. The first was that he was worth upwards of a million.

The other amazement was that most of the money goes to Elizabeth Wurthman, daughter of friends of the supposed pauper.

The millionaire made his will four years ago when Elizabeth was seventeen, just blossoming into young womanhood. Lehmeyer was then ninety-two.

REMEMBERS THE POOR.

He left many thousands as well to various charities. In addition to that Lehmeyer had, as revealed in a touching codicil to his will, provided for an old and needy sister whose existence he had just discovered in the old country.

Lehmeyer emigrated to this country years ago with all his possessions wrapped in a handkerchief. He never married. He grew rich in the real estate business.

Attorney Magison said he will try to get access to the records of Attorney General Sherman who handled the government's case against Ward.

The body of Clarence Peters was found on a lonely road in New Rochelle on May 15, 1922. Ward claimed he had shot Peters in self defence in a quarrel over systematic blackmailing of the Ward family by the latter. Ward did not, however, confess the shooting until three days after the body had been found.

RUNAWAY HUB BOYS QUIT AT WORCESTER

Worcester, Nov. 26.—Cold, travel-worn and without a meal since Friday, John Foley, sixteen years old, of No. 105 Bolton street, and John C. Iviniski, sixteen, of No. 171 Silver street, South Boston, walked into police headquarters here and gave themselves up as runaways.

The two Johns related that they fled from home Friday morning and begged a ride as far as Palmer. In Palmer a farmer gave them a meal apiece for their capital of a lone dollar. They slept unobserved in a hay loft Saturday and hiked as far as Worcester Sunday. They were sent home today.

BROTHER STABS BROTHER IN ROW OVER THIRD MAN'S WIFE

Lawrence, Nov. 26. — Vincente D'Erme, twenty-seven years old, of No. 167 Essex street, is under arrest, accused of probably having fatally stabbed his brother, Jerome, twenty-five years old, of No. 9 Methuen street, because he disapproved of the latter's friendliness with another man's wife.

The stabbing took place at Common and Jackson streets, as Jerome came out of a movie house. He met his brother and the latter's friend, Frank Camasso of No. 130½ Common street. An argument ensued over Jerome's attentions to Camasso's wife, Antonia.

Vincente is alleged to have drawn a knife and made numerous passes at his brother. Two of the thrusts took effect, one in the back of the head and the other below the left shoulder. Jerome was removed to the Lawrence General Hospital, where his name was placed on the danger list.

Vincente was arrested on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

FAINT SIGNALS.

N. Y.

The unremitting intereference by code was the biggest hindrance to the trans-Atlantic tests. Hundreds of listeners reported to the American that they picked up faint broadcast signals which might have been London, but that burst of code drowned them out.

Many wondered why it was not possible for the commercial operators to hold off the broadcasting wavelengths at least during the tests.

At least three American broadcasting stations ignored the silent half hour between 10:00 and 10:30. They were two stations in Chicago and a station in Kansas City.

FORD TRIES TONIGHT.

Tonight America will reciprocate to England with Henry Ford doing the speaking from WWI at Dearborn, Mich. Eight stations in all will take part, including WGI, Amrad station at Medford Hillside, WGY of Schenectady and WJZ of New York.

The British tests will be made again on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights, The American stations will repeat on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

Members of the Cabinet and other notables will broadcast addresses in exchange with the Prince of Wales, Prime Minister Baldwin and Marconi.

TURKEY PRICES FORCED DOWN

birds to be shipped to Boston in season for Thanksgiving. The first carloads are arriving and others are scheduled to arrive Tuesday and Wednesday.

"We wanted to get turkeys raised in New England, but New England growers do not produce a quantity sufficient for our purposes," said Mr. Adams. "The John T. Connor Company hopes to stimulate the production of turkeys and other staples on New England farms. It would mean a great saving in freight charges, eliminating long hauls."

The turkeys received by the John T. Connor Company today are all young birds, the hens weighing from six to ten pounds and the cocks from ten to fifteen pounds. They are fresh killed, dry packed and are arriving in excellent condition.

"The price of turkeys would be from sixty to seventy cents a pound in Boston today if it had not been for our campaign," said President Adams. "Last year nearly 7,000,000 pounds of turkeys were put into cold storage after Thanksgiving in order to keep the price up. The supply had absolutely no effect on the price. The grade of turkeys we are selling at retail for forty-five cents a pound is being quoted at forty-eight cents in the wholesale markets today, and would have gone higher but for our foresight in contracting for our supply before the dealers got control of the wholesale market.

"There are plenty of turkeys in the Western market that sell as low as twenty-cents a pound at wholesale, but they are not the sort that our company would care to handle."

WANTS U. S. TO CONTROL HARD COAL

Pinchot Proposes Different States Pool Police Powers to aid Federal Regulation

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 26.—Government control of the anthracite coal industry by State and Federal action and by a compact between the anthracite consuming state establishing a commission to enforce regulations to be agreed upon by the Governor was proposed by Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania today at a conference of representatives of the chief executive of the hard coal using States.

Such a commission as he proposed, he said "pooling the police powers of the States concerned, could, in co-operation with Federal authority over Interstate Commerce, completely regulate the whole industry from the mine to the consumer's bin."

The conference was called by Governor Pinchot to consider a "specific program" of legislation designed to keep down coal prices. It set forth three suggestions for such a program:

That the State executives use such powers as they now have to assure clean coal by publicity of fraudulent practices; that they ascertain and make public extortion being practiced and by whom; that they disseminate information as to fuel economy and substitutes, and that they act jointly in appealing to the Interstate Commerce Commission for consideration of anthracite freight rates.

PUNISH GOUGERS.

That the Federal government establish and enforce interstate commerce standards for clean coal and for sizes, that it license all those engaged in interstate anthracite trade, that it authorize the Interstate Commerce Commission to deny cars to profiteers and that it investigate and publish the facts.

That the Federal subpoena using States under a provision of the Federal Constitution agree upon the form of regulation "that will best work to the advantage of their people," and negotiate a treaty or compact to establish a joint commission to enforce it.

Declaring "the people are angry, and rightly so, over the long-continued and steadily increasing exactions of the anthracite monopoly, whose representatives have definite purpose to get out of the people the last cent the traffic will bear, because anthracite is a necessity in the control of a monopoly the anthracite industry is affected with a public interest.

"A monopoly affected with a public interest is a proper subject for government control."

DEFENDS TAX.

He said settlement of the coal strike involved an average increase in labor costs of 60 cents a ton, but that operators had added more than that. He cited figures to show they had increased their margins and that the companies had paid high dividends in recent years.

The Governor answered criticisms of the Governors of several other States that Pennsylvania first should take certain steps with respect to the industry, such as to repeal the law requiring certification of the miners and State tax on hard coal. He declared Pennsylvania already had "vigorously attacked" the problem of rock and dirt in coal and that the effect had been "strongly felt."

No one State could meet the situation.

No action, he said, was possible to affect royalties which were matters of private contract and most of which would continue in effect until December 30, 1928.

The certification law, the Governor termed, "a just and proper law" which should not be repealed as it would open the mines to unskilled mining and would result in either stopping or reducing production, permanent injury to the productive capacity of the mines or a vast increase in accidents.

To Play the Nun

ROSAMOND M. PINCHOT

PINCHOT NIECE TO BE NUN IN MIRACLE PLAY

New York, Nov. 26.—The part of the Nun in Max Reinhardt's "The Miracle," which it was thought Garrick Lili, beautiful and famous young Hungarian actress, was to play, has been offered to Rosamond M. Pinchot, seventeen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Minturn Pinchot, former wife of Amos Pinchot.

Her mother having given her consent, the niece of the Governor of Pennsylvania is preparing to appear at the Century Theatre with Lady Diana Manners, Princess Maria Carmi Natchabelli and other players in the cast when the spectacular pantomime opens about Christmas.

The manner of her selection for the part is as amazing as the fact that a young woman just emerging from girlhood, without any stage experience whatever, was the choice of Reinhardt, leading stage director of Central Europe.

Miss Pinchot and her mother were passengers on the steamship which brought Reinhardt to this country to prepare for the opening of "The Miracle." Reinhardt was far from satisfied that he had found the actress best fitted to play the Nun.

He was sitting on the deck with Einar Nilson, the Swedish composer, who has been his musical director for years, and Dr. Karl Vollmoeller, author of "The Miracle," when Miss Pinchot passed. Reinhardt glanced up.

"There is the Nun!" he exclaimed with sudden conviction, seizing the arms of his companions to direct their attention to Miss Pinchot.

A meeting was arranged and the suggestion was made to Miss Pinchot and her mother that the former was cast by Providence for a major role in "The Miracle."

2 KILLED IN PATH OF BLIZZARD

200 Autos Snowbound in Big Gale That Sweeps Western Part of State

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 26 (I.N.S.)—Western Massachusetts, Vermont, Connecticut and eastern and northern New York today are digging themselves out of a snowstorm of blizzard proportions that swept in from the West on the wings of a Winter gale, bearing death and destruction.

Telephone and telegraph service was almost crippled. Street car and train service was impaired for hours.

Scores of automobiles were snowbound in country roads in the foothills of the Catskills, Heidenbergs and Adirondack mountains.

In some places roads were blocked by drifts ten feet high.

Two deaths and scores of accidents in this section were blamed to the storm. Joseph Darcuer, twenty-six, of Hoffmans, between Schenectady and Amsterdam, was struck and killed by a New York Central train which he failed to see while blinded by the snow.

PERISHES IN STORM.

Abraham Masters, of No. 358 Clinton avenue, Albany, was killed by an automobile, while trying to shield himself from the fury of the storm with an umbrella.

Ten inches of snow fell in many sections, according to the United States Weather Bureau. This is one of the heaviest snowstorms for November in years.

Dunnesburg, a small village near Schenectady, with a reported snowfall of eighteen inches, topped the list of communities hard hit.

While the storm was at its height, the University Club, Washington avenue and Dover street, with its costly furnishings, was destroyed by fire, causing a loss of $100,000.

200 AUTOS MAROONED.

From North Adams and the Northern part of Berkshire County come reports of a heavy clinging snow, more than a foot deep. Telephone poles and wires were broken in the heavy storm to such an extent that linemen declare complete service cannot be restored for months.

Many parts of North Adams are entirely without electric lights or power. The Boston & Maine Railroad signal system was disabled and eighty-five block signals between North Adams and Mechanicsville were frozen.

Pittsfield reported more than 200 automobiles stalled on the sides of Mount Lebanon, eight miles west of the city. Many of the cars were returning west after the Harvard-Yale game.

The Mohawk Trial is buried underneath a foot of snow. In some places along the trail the snow has drifted into ten-foot banks.

Southern Vermont reports eighteen inches of snow, with all but horse-drawn traffic at a standstill.

LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.

WITH the event of a new week comes word from across the waters of the modification of milady's dress, which invariably affects the hip line. The pencil silhouette or the one flat in the back with flaring front gives way to the pillar silhouette, plain as a broom handle or "amused" as French creators term it, by circular ruffles, godets, projecting side pockets or "saddle-bags."

Side drapery, in fact, of any kind, color or artistic affectation, places the gown or costume suit as well as the wearer, in the first ranks of exclusiveness and ultra-fashion.

THE variations of the hip line are many indeed—high or low, full and circular, pointed and projecting, full and flowing—all bring the mode to innumerable possibilities for those less fortunate in line. If milady is slim, "saddle-bag" hip line gives her smart maturity. If she is pleasingly plump the mode works wonders for her. The effect of the full sides conceals her many curves.

For pockets on a shimmering pillar silhouette is undeniably French. The flowing and trailing georgette from the pointed pockets softens the gown and makes the whole a feature of distinctiveness. Smart from every point of view is the pictured frock of chartreuse crepe turco.

ANOTHER mode for the "saddle-bag" panniers is a graceful frock of brown crepe, straight in line with a fitted girdle. Brown georgette, finely pleated and hooped at the sides a trifle below the knee, hanging unevenly below the hem line, gives the frock an Oriental note. Two flat circles of fur attached to crepe bands are loosely tied and allowed to hang casually down the front.

Never before in the history of fashion has bead necklaces played such an important role. Today a hanging bead chain of hued color harmonious with the frock is a necessary feminine article and quite as indispensable as the silk handkerchief or the vanity case.

Graduated crystal in square diamond cut, bear forty-six inches of added beauty to the wearer and her appearance. Glass jewelry ingeniously painted by the glowing imagination of an artist, have been added to the wardrobes of smartly dressed women. Earrings with brilliantly colored centres, necklaces of glimmering glass, innumerable wristlets of rainbow colors on one arm—all soften and add charm and allurement.

THE morning attire is made complete by a bit of gloriously tinted jewelry. Tea and afternoon dresses are brightened and made more vital by just a touch of decorative Oriental or French glass. Amber is a favored string. Pearls are at all times just the thing, because of their unpretentiousness and dainty beauty. For the tea, the dinner or after the theatre party pearls are quite all right.

A string of heavenly blue, each bead touched slightly with gold, is very serviceable. Because the colors are soft and can easily be blended, it can be worn with black, brown, blue or cinnamon brown frocks. On a simple brown dress such a string is very effective. Not only does it add to the gown, but it lights up milady's face.

Neckwear is another feature of the daily mode. A soft hand and neck are two essentials for smartness. Standing collars, reminiful of the Chinese, finish costume blouses or the smart frock of serge or duvetyne. Sleeves are interesting when the idea of the full-turned back puff at the wrist is carried out. The boat-shape neck and the off-the-shoulder-decolletage still remain the two favorites for the silhouette and the bouffant models.

LOWELL BACKS $1,800,000 CLUB FOR HUB

President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard has formally approved the movement for the creation of the New University Club of Boston at a cost, in completed form, not to exceed $1,800,000.

In a letter to Donald D. McKay of the executive committee, President Lowell said: "I write to express my strong sympathy with the plan for a new University Club in Boston. Such clubs have been extremely valuable in all parts of the country and Boston certainly ought to have one adequate for the great number of university men among her citizens—a larger number, I presume, than in any other great city in the United States."

Nearly forty educational institutions throughout the United States are represented on the general committee in charge of the movement. The executive committee is as follows: Joseph W. Powell, chairman; James Jackson, treasurer; Henry I. Harriman, Clifton H. Dwinnell, Donald D. McKay and Guy W. Currier, counsel.

In an announcement today the executive committee said: "For many years the need of an enlarged University Club has been felt by the college and university men of Boston. Boston is one of the largest academic centres of the country, and yet we have had no University Club of adequate size, such as may be found in New York and Chicago."

The committee's plan calls for a club to be located at the corner of Trinity place and Stuart street, the land, six-story building and equipment to cost about $1,800,000. First and second mortgages, tentatively arranged, will provide about $1,100,000, leaving $700,000 to be subscribed by the charter members. Resident membership will be limited to 5,000 men.

Military Ball at Copley Plaza to Be Society Mecca, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN

THERE will be plenty of local color at the military ball taking place at the Copley-Plaza on December 7.

A snappy feature will be the competition drill at 11 o'clock between platoons from the army, navy and marine corps, a handsome cup to be awarded for the platoon giving the best performance.

Mrs. Ronald T. Lyman, who's back at the town house on Beacon street after a stay at the Waltham country home, is in charge of the ball. The proceeds, by the way, will be given to the Army and Navy Club on Park square.

Mrs. Lyman's fellow-workers include among others, Mesdames Lars Anderson, Philip S. Sears, Louis de Steigner, Edwin S. Webster, Richard H. H. Dana, Andre W. Brewster and Walter M. Pratt, as well as Messrs. Walter H. Bradley, Frederick S. Whitwell, Ross T. Whistler and Guy Murchie.

All of the boxes have already been subscribed to, and a large attendance is assured for this event which promises to be one of the most colorful of the season. Several orchestras will be on hand to keep things humming all the time.

SPEAKING of the military ball, I note with interest that the tremendously long and distinguished patroness list includes the name of Miss Eleonora Sears, better known to her wide circle of friends as "Elee."

Eleonora Sears.

The sport-loving daughter of Frederick R. Sears travels about a great deal, and one doesn't often find her in the role of a patroness. Though Europe generally claims Miss Sears for several months of each year, she spent almost the entire season on the North Shore, with, of course, frequent trips to Newport and other resorts.

A few of the other sponsors for a week from Friday's ball are Madames Oliver Ames, J. A. Lowell Blake, Gorham Brooks, Allan Forbes, Charles P. Greenough, 2d., Francis L. Higginson, Quincy A. Shaw, Bayard Thayer and S. Huntington Welcott.

MRS. HARRY HILL Thorndike is giving a reception at the Chilton Club on Wednesday of next week for her debutante daughter, Miss Isabel Thorndike.

Miss Thorndike, a tall brunette, took the part of Juliet at the Shakespeare festival, staged recently by society folk at the Copley-Plaza.

THE last of a series of lectures in aid of the South End Music School will be held a week from this afternoon.

Miss Rose Dexter is lending her home at No. 400 Beacon street for the occasion, when Thomas Whitney Surette will speak on the "Art of Music."

A fashionable throng filled the drawing rooms of Mrs. Henry Lyman's Commonwealth avenue home a week ago for the second of this series.

Richard Boleslawsky, formerly of the Moscow Art Theatre, spoke on "The Art of Drama."

Among the listeners I noted Miss Olivia Ames, wearing an all-brown costume, very becoming to her soft brown hair and gray-blue eyes.

New York, Nov. 26.—A uniformed doorman to guard automobiles during service and assist members of the church in and out of their cars at the church door has been installed at the West End Presbyterian Church as a means of improving the attendance. ## It takes Money to Bake at Home for there is the cost of the coal (or gas), and the ingredients that are called for by the recipe. There is the labor, and worry, the fear that the slamming door will make the cake "fall" in the oven, and the question whether the cake will be really good or just "so-so." That represents more money than it will take to buy Drake's Cake from the nearby grocery

FIREBUG BLAZE ROUTS GIRLS AT WELLESLEY

Thirty Wellesley College girls fled from their dormitory when the college carpenter shop was destroyed by fire and threatened the dormitory. The fire is believed to have been of incendiary origin.

The blaze was the second of a mysterious nature in the vicinity of the college within the last two days. The first was Ahern's large barn, near the college, which was burned to the ground.

George Wooley, night watchman at the college, discovered the fire and gave the alarm. Within ten minutes, the town and college fire departments were pumping water from the college lake, wetting down the adjoining buildings.

Claflin Annex, a dormitory housing about thirty girls, is close to the shop. Hundreds of girls from other dormitories hastily dressed and rushed out to watch the fire.

Fire from the carpenter shop, which is the oldest of the college group, rapidly spread to the lumber shed and the cake shop. The fronts of both buildings were destroyed.

The first fire of the series which Chief McNamara definitely attributes to incendiaries destroyed an ice house early this Fall at the Academy of the Assumption. Fire which destroyed the ice house of the Newton Ice Company and a cottage at the Academy of the Assumption later in the Fall are also believed thy the chief to have been set.

The woman who thought that she might not like Mah Jongg, and so bought a cheap set, sighs now for a set of beautiful workmanship. The debutante needs a gay little memorandum book with monthly refills to keep her engagements in order.

The lover of antique china, glass, silver, or furniture, the matron who longs for a bracelet, the young girl who feels that she is old enough for an important ring—all of them are easy to please.

These suggestions are chosen from here and there in the hope that they may tempt you to share your Christmas secrets with us.

INVOKES GOD OF INDIAN IN OLD N.Y. CHURCH

New York, Nov. 26.—The throbbing detonations of the tom-tom replaced the formal canticles of the Anglican faith in New York's second oldest church, and in the shadowed chancel where generation upon generation of Episcopal believers have propitiated the God of their fathers Rev. Dr. William Norman Guthrie, pastor of St. Mark's in the Bouwerie invoked the gods of the American Indian.

Overhead from low hanging glass incenses orange and purple lights were given off and near the altar two great brass bowls discharged two thin gray streams of smoke.

The services were conducted according to the "American aboriginal religious rites," which, in the words of Dr. Guthrie, "required neither apology nor explanation."

In the audience was the Princess Tsianian, who had come to St. Mark's in her native Cherokee costume to speak of the grievances of the Indian. She swung her beads and nodded her head frequently when Dr. Guthrie intoned the Indian supplications.

The rites had to do with the birth of a child. There was first a prayer, in which Dr. Guthrie addressed the morning star. Then came the responsive reading and after that an Indian chant sung by the choir—a slow, insistent variation of a single melodic sequence and a single rhythm.

The congregation was asked to sing "The Song of the Pleiades" and did—though not without a certain appearance of embarrassment.

In the second half of the services the congregation was called upon to participate in a "mystic contemplation prayer" which was broken up the frequent intervals by "The Song of the Blue Corn Dance," chanted by Dr. Guthrie.

Speaks in Church

PRINCESS TSIANIAN

In native Cherokee costume this Indian Princess took part in the "aboriginal religious rites" in the second oldest New York Church and afterwards addressed the congregation on the grievances of her race.

Two Cities in Darkness

Lewiston, Me., Nov. 26.—Lewiston and Auburn were plunged into darkness when Robert Parker of Lewiston, an employe at the plant of the Androscoggin Electric Company stepped on a high voltage wire causing a short circuit. Lights in the two cities remained out for about fifteen minutes. Parker, badly burned, was taken to a local hospital.

1,382 IN RACE FOR 615 SEATS IN BRITAIN

London, Nov. 26 (I.N.S.)—With a heavy fog prevailing throughout Britain political candidates today filed their official nominations for the general election on Dec. 6.

It was estimated 1,382 candidates would be in the field for election to the 615 seats in the House of Commons.

According to announcements from the various party headquarters, the following nominations were filed: Tories (supporters of a protective tariff), 531; Liberals (Free Traders), 420; Laborites, 416; Independents, Communists and Nationalists, 15.

Thirty-seven women had announced their intention of filing nominations, as follows: Tories, 8; Liberals, 13; Laborites, 14; Independents, 2.

Among those on the Labor ticket is the Countess of Warwick.

Fifty-six of the various candidates will be elected without opposition, including 38 Tories, 10 Liberals, 6 Laborites and two others.

Major Astor, a Tory candidate, had no opposition, nor has T. P. O'Connor, a Nationalist.

Lady Astor is opposed only by a Labourite, Rachel Parsons, daughter of the inventor of the turbine, opposes a Laborite in Lancashire.

In one of the Birmingham divisions Mrs. George Cadbury, Liberal, and Mrs. Bacon, Labor, are seeking the seat of Sir Herbert Austin, Conservative.

Other feminine candidates are the Duchess of Athol and Gwynne Vaughan, Conservatives, Lady Torrington, Liberal.

Lord Younger, who as Sir George Younger, is credited with having forced the resignation of the Lloyd George government, has taken command of the Conservative campaign.

DECKHAND BELIEVED VICTIM OF MURDER

Providence, Nov. 26.—Police believe T. Fredval Johanson, twenty-six, towboat deckhand, found dead in a lot off Tilden avenue, Newport, was murdered. John J. Cavanaugh, who shipped on the same towboat, the Eureka of the Staples Transportation Company, a month ago and who was found in the same lot when police investigated, is being held as a suspicious person. The body of Johansen was found by boys. Blood flowed from the mouth and teeth were missing, evidence of a blow by a blunt instrument. Cavanaugh and Johansen had been drinking together.

HAVERHILL WOMAN FATALLY BURNED

Haverhill, Nov. 26.—Mrs. Ellen Rogers, fifty-six years old, of No. 74 Locust street, a widow, died at the Dale Hospital of burns received when she fell over a kerosene lamp at her home. Mrs. Rogers knocked the lamp from a table when she fell against it. The table was also overturned and her clothes caught fire from the burning table cover. Patrolman John Wholey, attracted by the woman's cries, arrived and extinguished her burning clothes by wrapping her in a rug.

FIGHT TO REDUCE TAX ON ALCOHOL

Washington, Nov. 26 (I.N.S.)—New tax legislation in Congress following Secretary of the Treasury Mellon's plan to reduce taxes, will be featured by a fight to lower the tax on industrial alcohol, used for manufacturing medicine and other scientific purposes. Drug manufacturers are united for a proposal to lower this class of taxes, or abolish them entirely, as they hit directly at the sick.

TYPOS' HEAD COMING HERE FOR CONFERENCE

It is expected that President Charles P. Howard of the International Typographical Union will arrive in Boston today from New York for a conference with President McBride of Boston Local 13 in regard to matters of importance to the local and the printing industry, according to a statement made at the meeting of Local 13 in the Franklin Union.

As a tribute to the memory of Thomas J. Franklin, who dropped dead Thursday night while going home from work on a Boston daily newspaper, the members stood in silence for one minute.

NOTED GAMBLING PALACE BURNED

Providence, Nov. 26.—The Pilgrim Automobile Club, one of the famous halls of chance in Rhode Island, was destroyed in a fire which necessitated the calling out of practically all the fire-fighting apparatus of the city of Cranston. The isolated location of the building was a large factor in confining the blaze to that structure only.

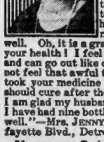
Mrs. Evans Freed from Female Weakness by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound



Detroit, Michigan.—"I had female weakness with pains in my back, and I could not stand on my feet for any length of time. I was working in a factory but had to quit as I was too much on my feet. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me, and I can hardly believe it myself that I am well. Oh, it is a grand thing to have your health! I feel well all the time and can go out like other women and not feel that awful torture. When I took your medicine first I thought it should cure after the first bottle, but I am glad my husband kept me at it. I have had nine bottles and now I am well."—Mrs. Jenny Evans, 1604 Lafayette Blvd., Detroit, Michigan.

If you are suffering from displacements, irregularities, backache, nervousness or other forms of female weakness, you should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The reason is given in letters like these, and we have published thousands of them. You may expect that a medicine that has helped other women will help you. Try it.

GIRL RELATES WEIRD TALE OF KIDNAPING

Stranger than fiction is the kidnaping story of Mildred Czahanska, a little South End garment worker.

Mildred's story, as told to Sergeant Edward J. Ryan of the Roxbury Station, in City Hospital, is:

"I am fifteen years old. I live with my father, August Czhanska, at No. 24 Locust street, Dorchester. I work in the shop of the Union Garment Company on Bristol street, South End. We have a half holiday on Saturday.

"I left the shop shortly after noontime and started for home. As I was crossing Albany street at Southampton street I was struck by an automobile. I remember seeing the automobile coming toward me. I redoubler trying to get out of the way. I remember the pain in my head as I was knocked down and fell to the pavement. That is all.

AWOKE IN WOODS.

"The next I remember was when I awoke. I was in an automobile. The automobile was in the woods. I was in the back seat of the car. There was a man at my side and another man in the driver's seat.

"One of the men said: 'I guess she's going to be all right.'

"The other man asked what time it was. The first man said it was nine o'clock. I was dazed, but I saw it was dark. I knew it must be nine o'clock at night.

"I felt dizzy again and my mind went blank.

"The next I remember was when I awoke. It was daylight. I was still in the automobile. The automobile was still in the woods. The two men were in the car.

"One of the men—the one who sat beside me—said it was afternoon. The driver started up the engine and we began to drive through the woods. We drove for a long time. I felt very weak and dazed. I don't know how long we drove.

NOT MOLESTED.

"Neither of the men attempted to touch me.

"Finally, toward evening, we came out of the woods. The automobile was driven into Boston.

"At the corner of Albany and Southampton streets the driver stopped the car. It was dark. The man in the back seat lifted me up in his arms and carried me to the sidewalk. There was nobody in sight. I sat on the curbstone and watched the men drive away. They looked back. Both were about twenty-five years old. They wore dark overcoats. I think I would know them if I saw them again.

BLACK TOURING CAR.

"I didn't see what numbers were on the number plates of the automobile. It was a black touring car.

"I felt sick and tired and my head ached so I walked over to City Hospital. That's all I can tell you."

Hospital doctors gave Mildred a thorough examination. They could not find that she was injured in any way. However, they put her to bed for observation.

When the girl did not return home, her father notified the police of her absence. She was posted as missing. Her name and description was sent to City police.

BOYS' CURIOSITY WRECKS AUTO, INJURES 7

Curiosity killed a cat—and also injured two Medford boys and five Somerville firemen.

It all resulted when Henry McCarthy, fifteen years old, of No. 83 North street, Medford Hillside, accompanied by his chum, James Maher, sixteen years old, of No. 249 Boston avenue, Medford Hillside, passed a truck in the rear of the Tufts Chemical Laboratory and felt an irresistible impulse to determine the amount of gasoline in the tank.

LIT MATCH TO SEE.

Obtaining a stick of wood, the McCarthy boy inserted it in the tank and withdrew it. It was getting dusk and neither of the boys bending over the gas tank could see the mark made by the gasoline. McCarthy, accordingly lit a match.

The resulting explosion knocked the boys on their backs and also caused the truck to burst into flames. The blaze was extinguished after $100 damage had been done. The boys were removed to the hospital. McCarthy had severe cuts of the face and hands and his companion was suffering from a cut of the right hand.

FIVE FIREMEN HURT.

In responding to the blaze caused by the two youths, five Somerville firemen were badly shaken up when the axle of Ladder 2 truck broke as the truck rounded the corner at Highland and Cedar streets, Somerville. The truck plowed up the pavement for several yards and came to a stop.

Lieutenant William Brady, Driver John Savage and Laddermen Rogers, Craige and Kennedy, occupants of the truck, were badly shaken up. The wrecked truck was towed back to the fire station.

POLICE SEEK AUTOIST WHO INJURED MAN

The police of Cambridge are searching for a reckless autoist, who early today struck and knocked down John Anderson, No. 740 Charles River road, and narrowly missed striking another man while the pair were attempting to cross the street near Anderson's home.

Anderson was picked up in an unconscious condition and taken to the Cambridge City Hospital, where he is in a serious condition. Several of the numbers on the rear registration plate were caught by a person who saw the accident and the police believe they will be able to trace the speeding offender.

LEXINGTON MAN HELD IN BRIBE CASE

Chief of Police Edward M. Leavitt of Lexington arrested Leonard K. Dunham of Woburn street, Lexington, animal and slaughter inspector of the town, on a charge of attempting to bribe him to allow the operation of a big still.

Chief Leavitt charges that Dunham offered him $100 weekly for portection in the operation of a still by a friend of Dunham. Dunham was released on $500 bail.

Leavitt, the State's youngest police chief, alleges Dunham came to him and told him he knew where he could make some easy money. He said, according to Chief Leavitt, that a friend of his was willing to pay him $100 a week if he would allow him to run a big still in Lexington unmolested.

"You're a young fellow," the chief alleged Dunham said to him, "and you ought to be getting in on this money while the getting is good. I have a friend who will pay you $100 a week if you'll allow him to run a still unmolested in this town.

"I have made arrangements for you to meet him and I want you to come to Boston with me to a dinner party, where we'll meet him and talk things over."

During the war Chief Leavitt was a member of the navy intelligence and was conspicuously active in narcotic drug work in Boston.

Dunham was appointed animal and slaughter inspector by the Board of Selectmen several years ago. He is fifty-three years old and has two children.

"GO TO JAIL," UNTERMEYER TELLS CRAIG

New York, Nov. 26 (Universal).—Samuel Untermyer, celebrated New York attorney, said that Comptroller Charles L. Craig should insist on going to jail in order to force an investigation of the "rotten system" which permitted his being prosecuted and judged by the same man.

Sam'l Untermeyer Chas. S. Craig

"If Mr. Craig has that fine sense of public service with which I credit him," said Mr. Untermyer, "He will make the sacrifice of refusing executive clemency and will go to jail and thus force a congressional investigation that will expose and uproot our rotten system."

Mr. Untermyer said further:

The perusal of Judge Mayer's opinion in the Craig case failed to convince him that the comptroller had committed contempt.

That the successive acts of the federal court in the B. R. T. receivership had worked a grave injustice to the city.

Representative F. A. La Guardia announced that he would confer with progressives in Congress with the idea of initiating a sweeping congressional inquiry into the record of Judge Julius L. Mayer, who sentenced Craig, and of his associate federal judges in the southern district of New York.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, who has gone to Washington to urge executive clemency for Mr. Craig, will confer with President Coolidge today.

"Prices realized on Swift & Company sales of carcass beef in Boston for week ending Saturday, November 24th, on shipments sold out, ranged from 8.00 cents to 17.75 cents per pound and averaged 14.16 cents per pound."—Advt.

Steel and Love Revealed in Romance of Corey and Mabel Gilman

New York, Nov. 26 (C.N.S.)—There is romance in steel! But the romance of William Ellis Corey, born almost among the belching furnaces of great steel plants, who lived his life with steel, who became a millionaire many times over through steel—the romance that has followed and surrounded him through life is not the romance of steel about which poets sing.

Mr. Corey's first romance was shattered "because he couldn't live without" a woman who entered his life; his second romance has now gone down to cracking ruin. Mr. Corey has been divorced again, this time by Mabel Gilman Corey, the actress, who caused the first break in his family relations, the woman without whom he could not live.

Mabel Gilman Corey.

On May 4, 1886, the little rambling wooden home of James Ellis Corey at Braddock, Pa., on the edge of the steel country, was thrown into the age-old excitement of a "new arrival." William Ellis Corey was born of poor parents struggling for existence, but apparently born under a most lucky star.

He went into steel. For eighteen years he prospered. He was making his mark in steel. He was trusting the romance of steel. He was even coming under the notice of Andrew Carnegie. And then that other romance entered his life. And this is the story:

CHAPTER ONE

The young man, William Ellis Corey—feeling the prosperity of steady and conscientious work growing upon him, looked around at the girls of Braddock. He was friendly with all. But he chose one.

There were nights when Corey could be found swinging in the hammock thrown under the trees down at Mary Cook's house.

Poor, struggling, but with prosperity assured and just ahead, Corey, then a weight master in the steel plant nearby, married Mary Cook in 1893. He did not have enough money on hand to furnish a home. But his wife did. She bought a place and furnished it.

That union was lucky, it seemed. He became an assistant superintendent, then superintendent. And then on May 1, 1897, Andrew Carnegie picked him out of the many in his steel plants. Corey became superintendent of the Homestead Steel Works, succeeding Charles M. Schwab. Two years later aged thirty-five, Corey was chosen by Carnegie as the man to head the United States Steel Company, and again he succeeded Mr. Schwab.

Through that meteoric rise his country girl wife had stood side by side with him. There had been a son. Their married life was declared by everyone to be typically American. Although they were fabulously rich, they loved each other.

CHAPTER TWO

One day late in 1903, Corey went to the opening show of "The Mocking Bird." An actress in that play attracted his attention. He tried to meet her. He failed.

At the end of two weeks Corey went under a pressing invitation to a "club swimming party" and there quite by chance, Corey met Mabel Gilman, the actress of "The Mocking Bird."

From that time the second phase of the romance Corey found in steel was shaped. He was madly in love with the beautiful, accomplished and active Mabel Gilman.

But Corey was a man. He went to Mrs. Corey and told her. She was as courageous as he. She told him he could have a divorce. She went back to Braddock.

Late in 1904 Mrs. Corey was going to Reno for the divorce she had promised her husband. But as she went to the Braddock station to take the train she met her husband. In exactly two minutes an agreement was made. It was announced that Corey would give up Miss Gilman and that Mrs. Corey would remain at the head of his household.

CHAPTER THREE

Two months went by. Corey found he couldn't give up Miss Gilman. There was another conference with the brave woman who was willing to give up her husband and make him happy and this time Mrs. Corey did go to Reno. She cried as she was given a divorce on July 20, 1905.

Mrs. Corey was given $700,000 by her husband. He also created a trust fund for her and for his son. Financially the arrangement was sound. But there was no account of the heart breaks which Mrs. Corey's romance had cost.

CHAPTER FOUR

At midnight July 14, 1907, Mr. Corey married Miss Gilman in New York. There was a special hotel room fixed up as a chapel. There was a ship sailing for France at noon on July 14 and neither Corey nor Miss Gilman would risk being married on the thirteenth of the month.

Miss Gilman with that butterfly spirit which she had caged because of her husband, went to France and opened the great chateau he bought her. She began to give parties, scintillating affairs that were the talk of Paris. Most of the time Corey was with her. But after the war Corey remained, for the most part, here. He didn't go across as often. There wasn't the same enthusiasm. It was, therefore, no great surprise that the divorce was granted in Paris.

There is romance in steel. But the romance Corey found after living and eating steel all his life has been shattered. But that romance, of course, is not the kind of romance about which we hear so much.

HUB IRISH RAISE $5,000 FOR REPUBLIC

More than $5,000 was raised at a mass meeting in Symphony Hall, held under the auspices of the State Committee of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, in which the Rev. Fr. Michael O'Flanagan of Ireland addressed nearly 6,000 persons.

Rev. O'Flannigan

The name of David Lloyd George, former premier of Great Britain was hissed every time his name was mentioned. Other English leaders, including Premier Baldwin, were held up to scorn.

The Rev. Fr. O'Flannigan, the principal speaker, has just arrived in America from Ireland. He opened his address with a direct appeal to the Irish-Americans of Boston to save the Irish Republic.

EX-PREMIER FAILED.

Lloyd George, the speaker declared, prepared for his visit to America by clever press agents, who "herded the loafers from Central Park and marched them to the docks to give a Lloyd George demonstration.

"Lloyd George's visit to America was a complete failure," he said, "and it's a good thing he didn't come to Boston. He read the handwriting on the wall and went elsewhere.

"I sat opposite Lloyd George at a London conference table. I never knew a man so tricky or so treacherous. He would sell Ireland, lock, stock and barrel, in a minute if he had a chance.

"England and the Free Staters will soon be forced by public opinion to release the 15,000 Irish Republican prisoners now in the Irish jails and penitentiaries," he declared.

Many of the bishops in Ireland were flayed by the speaker for [illegible] land."

Patrick Haggerty of Springfield, presided at the meeting. Edward J. Harty, New York Irish leader, was in charge of the raising of funds. The Rev. Dennis Gilvay of Ireland made a short address.

Mayor Curley, unable to be present because of a speaking engagement in Worcester, was represented by City Councillor James T. Moriarty.

Fully 1,000, unable to enter, remained on the sidewalks outside until the meeting was over.

their attitude.

He charged England with censoring and falsifying news from Ireland."

New York, Nov. 26.—Unable to feign happiness on the stage while stricken with sorrow over the death of her mother two weeks ago, Billie Carlton, twenty-four years old, an actress, who had been with a Shubert production, attempted suicide in her apartment by taking poison, according to the police.

She is in a critical condition in Bellevue Hospital.

Miss Carlton, whose real name is Annie Rosner, lost her mother two weeks ago and was so grief stricken that she found it impossible to continue on the stage. Since then she had been brooding continuously.

GRAVE OF FAMED INDIAN CHIEF FOUND

New York, Nov. 26.—The search by members of the Daughters of the Revolution and Mayflower Descendants for the last resting place of Massasoit, chief of the Wamponoags and father of King Philip and friend of Governor Winslow of Plymouth, came to an abrupt end.

Relics dug from an Indian burial place in Warren, R. I., by the late Charles L. Carr and presented to the museum of the American Indian, have settled the disputed location of the grave of the friend of the Pilgrims.

55 EXAMINED AT BETTER BABIES OPENING

Fifty-five mothers and their babies attended the first clinic today of the Better Babies Conference, which is being conducted by the Boston Health Department with the assistance of the Boston American in the Municipal Building, at West Brookline street and Shawmut avenue, South End.

Dr. George K. Pratt, medical director of the Massachusetts Society for Mental Hygiene, and two other psychologists, tested the mental condition of the babies. The maximum score is 200 and children from 3 to 60 months old were examined.

The physical examination was next with a score of 380 points. The physicians examined the head, hair, scalp, face, neck, chest, back, abdomen, arms and hands, legs and feet, posture and gait, skin, nutrition and muscles and nerves.

TEETH EXAMINED

The third section of the examination was the oral and dental. A search was made for delayed teething, irregular teeth, the number decayed, notches and ridges and malocclusion.

The mouths of the infants were examined most carefully for any signs of abnormal gums, coated tongue, offensive breath, deformity caused by the thumb sucking habit, and for pale lips.

Ear, nose and throat specialists then examined the children for abnormal sizes and positions. The ears were examined for defective hearing, discharges and abnormal sizes and positions the same as the eyes. The nose and mouth were scrutinized for discharges of an offensive character, for enlarged tonsils and adenoids.

3 WEEKS MORE.

The infants were lastly measured and weighed by Dr. Frederick J. Bailey. A review of each baby was then made, and the mother presented with the markings.

The conference will be continued each afternoon with the exception of Sunday from today until the close which is expected to take at least three weeks.

Dr. Bailey, under whose supervision the Better Babies' Conference is being conducted, with the approval of Dr. Francis X. Mahoney, health commissioner, once again has asked those mothers, who have received an appointment card, following their application made on a coupon printed in the Boston American, to make an effort to be at the conference on the date specified on the card received by them from the health department.

DR. GRANT AGAIN SCORES 'VIRGIN BIRTH' BELIEF

New York, Nov. 26.—The Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, declared that the action of the House of Bishops in affirming a literal belief in the Virgin birth of Christ was an affront to the scientific spirit and true faith.

That assertion was made in a sermon entitled "The Bishops and the Creed." He referred to the bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Rev. Dr. Grant

The Rev. Dr. Grant was asked last year to recant previous unorthodox assertions or leave the church. Nothing ever came of it, however.

The rector, asked to explain the meaning of the bishops' action, said.

"Such a resolution is reactionary and consequently discouraging to a great many young people of modern education, of energy and of desire for service through the church, who can not force their intellectual equipment into such narrow quarters as a literal interpretation of the Apostles creed.

"It is not marching on with the scientific spirit of the times so we have a right to call it a reaction. That is, it pertains to an attitude of the past rather than the attitude of the present which is trying to assimilate from knowledge and all vital relations everything that will benefit mankind in its great problem of living today."

Dr. Grant quoted Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts to show that critcism might spring "from a living faith," which he said "is necessarily restive under imperfect expression."

Home-made, but Has No Equal for Coughs

Makes a family supply of really dependable cough medicine. Easily prepared, and saves about $2.

If you have a severe cough or chest cold, soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up at night with croup and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes a pint of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

You can feel this take hold of a cough instantly. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle, and soothes and heals the irritated membranes of the throat and bronchial tubes with such ease and promptness that it is really astonishing.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds.

There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

CREEP TO BE THIN, OPERA STAR SAYS

New York, Nov. 26.—If it is your fate to be fat, Frieda Hempel says, you can take the "fat" out of "fate."

"Creep."

That's the secret, says Frieda, the diva.

"Creep and be slinky, shed your fat, become lean and lissome."

Take a baby for your athletic model. If you haven't a baby of your own to imitate, then use your friend's baby.

Frieda says she lost thirty pounds in two months by creeping, not creeping all that time, of course, but at suitable intervals.

"It was not just plain creeping," said Frieda today. "It was creeping toward a goal, making the motions with hands, feet and knees. It was concentrated creeping.

"Try it. Creep slowly, intently. By the time you have circled the room once you will be tired. Now take another turn just for luck.

"This Summer at the place where I was staying there was the most adorable baby. His creeping technique was perfect.

"He taught me how to creep. I paid for my creeping lessons by singing him lullabys."

Frieda Hempel.

German General is Invited to Sit at English Banquet

London, Nov. 26.—A remarkable incident, showing how quickly war animosity is forgotten in England, occurred in connection with a proposed dinner to General Smuts, Premier of South Africa.

The English veterans of the South African campaign against the Germans in German East Africa, which was led by General Smuts, determined to give a dinner to their old commander.

It was unanimously voted to send also, an invitation to Major-General von Lettow Vorbeck of the Germany army, against whom they fought, to be a guest also. Vorbeck said he would be glad to meet the chivalrous men who fought against him.

Baltimore, Nov. 26.—Birthday greetings hurried over telegraph wires from one hopeless little invalid to another.

Sally May Brittingham, 9-year-old Baltimore girl, who was doomed as a baby to spend her life with her body supported by a brace, sent this message of cheer to Helen Hamilton, the little Camden, N. J., girl who prayed that she might live until today, her thirteenth birthday.

"Birthday greetings and God bless you little girl. You surely have been brave and I wish you with all my heart many more happy birthdays."

The message was sent for her by her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Brittingham. Since she was two, little Sally May has been going from one children's institution to another, trying to get well, for the doctors had decided she had a tubercular spine.

GAS COMPANY EMPLOYES GIVEN INSTRUCTION AT BOSTON UNIVERSITY

Taught That Courtesy and Special Individual Attention to Customers Is Essential

The young boy who thinks that his parents are the meanest folks in the world because they want him to keep on going to school, when he reaches the long-pants age may and a cheering morsel is the fact that employes of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company have to go to school—and age doesn't matter.

For quite a few months now Boston's Gas Company has been sending its employes to school, particularly those who have occasion to come into contact with the public to any degree. The plan has got past the experimental stage and the company is now beginning to get real returns on its investment, the employes attending on "company time." Regular attendance is required and the employes cannot take it lightly. They have to be there and they have to study.

Fits Employes For Positions

Service to the customers is the purpose of the special training designed to fit employes for the positions they fill in the company's organization. The Institute was organized for the company at Boston University in 1922 and the subjects are taught by members of the regular faculty. The first course was so successful another was given last Spring and now another course is in progress. The classes are held one each week and are of one and a half hours' duration.

All classes of employes attend, even the superintendents, the foremen of shop and street men, chief clerks and, in fact, every employe whose duty includes the handling and direction of other men. The salesmen have classes in which they learn about the various appliances they handle.

Another course gives the employes useful information about the company's principal product, gas, and the numerous appliances that make the use of gas a pleasure and comfort, as well as a necessity, in the homes and factories. Chemical analysis and the methods of production, distribution and the use of gas are features of the course.

Make Drawings on Premises

A course in free-hand drawing is provided for employes who have occasion to go into houses and factories to discuss installation. This training makes it possible for them to draw sketches on the premises, giving the customer an idea of the extent of the wo... to be done and its approximate cost subject to verification by cost experts. Seventy-six employes are taking this course alone

Must Have "Telephone Voice"

Another group who use the telephone a great deal are instructed in its use, courtesy and efficiency being the joint aim of this course. It has been found absolutely essential that employes have a pleasing "telephone voice." This course is given under the direction of John Chilton Scammell, instructor in elocution and English. Still another group studies accounting, as it applies to the gas industry, using the company's own books and forms as a basis of study. Others study stenography, correspondence and dictation.

The entire course is founded upon the requirements of the gas company and is on a practical basis, using actual cases encountered daily in the gas business. The course is under the general direction of Professor Harold Whitehead, head of the department of Sales Relations, and the faculty are from the Boston University School of Business Administration.

Instructors of Regular Faculty

Instructors of the various classes are: Accounting, James G. Toner; Salesmanship, Oscar T. Smith; Chemical History of the Gas Industry, Charles E. Stratton; Operating Control, Ralph W. Wells; Use of Telephone, John C. Scammell; Correspondence, Harry B. Center; Drawing, Major Z. L. Drollinger.

Dean Everett W. Lord conducts a class for the study of the Constitution of the United States and like subjects.

President Dana D. Barnum of the Gas Company regards the Institute as one of the most important of the company's public service plans, and believes that the benefits will far exceed the cost and effort put into it.

Makes Better Employes

"Already it has done a great deal for the employes," he said yesterday. "It has made them better employes and has made them serve the public better. Special individual service to the public is the main idea, for the better our employes serve the public the better it will be for the company.

"We consider our employes as fine a type as can be found in any large commercial organization, and we want to have them better than any other. This Institute gives them the training to make them more efficient. When they make friends of the customers they are doing their best for the company.

"We insist that every employe of the company who comes in contact with the public be courteous and well-informed."

MAYOR CURLEY LAUDS XMAS BASKET FUND

Mayor James M. Curley today endorsed the Helping Hand Christmas Basket Fund of the American in glowing terms. Boston's live-wire Mayor backed up his endorsement by a personal check for $100. He has been a regular contributor to the Basket Fund.

The Mayor's letter commending the work done by the fund in feeding needy families at Christmas speaks for itself. It follows:

"The beauty and tenderness of Christmas is enhanced by the generosity we display to the needy and unfortunate into whose lives the Boston American furnishes us opportunity to bring sunshine and happiness.

WHOLE WORLD KIN.

"Christmas is the one day of the year when the whole world is kin; it is the day of the Little Child around whose name and birth the kindly traditions of the home and family are clustered; the day that is specially the holiday of the children; and the day when home calls to home, rich to poor, child to child, and when the open hand and the generous spirit are in evidence everywhere.

"The appeal of the American has my whole-hearted approbation and endorsement, and I urge all who are blest with happy homes and smiling children, to remember those other homes from which comfort is absent, and those other children upon whom fortune has not smiled; that out of their prosperity and plenty they may send some of the blessed spirit of mercy and good cheer to make Christmas truly a season of peace on earth and good will to men and a day when the heart of every little child in Boston may be filled with gladness, and every home with rejoicing."

THEATRE BENEFIT.

The Messrs. Shubert were so highly pleased at the success of the two benefit performances of "Dew Drop Inn" in behalf of the American's Fund that they have decided to contribute 10 per cent. of the proceeds of the opening performance of "The Lady in Ermine" to the fund.

This wonderful light opera will open at the Wilbur Theatre, Monday evening, December 3. The cast includes Walter Woolf, Zella Russell, Harry K. Morton, Nancy Gibbs, Shirley Sherman, Clarence Harvey, Gladys Walton, Delmar Kopp-ch, Timothy Daly and Isabelle Rodriguez.

According to those who have witnessed the production in other cities this sparkling, romantic opera is filled with unusual, tuneful melodies. It also contains many dramatic settings interwoven with refreshing humor. It is said to be one of the most colorful productions on the American stage today. The cast includes ninety people.

OPERA BIG SUCCESS.

"The Lady in Ermine" was a big success in Europe, having long runs in London, Paris and Vienna. It ran an entire season last year at the Ambassador Theatre, New York, being regarded as one of the most successful productions of the year.

Remember, theatregoers—by witnessing, "The Lady in Ermine" on the opening night you will not only hear one of the best light operas that will visit Boston this season but you will also have the additional pleasure of assisting in feeding needy children at Christmas.

As a result of contributions from football enthusiasts who attended the Boston College-Vermont game at Braves Field, Saturday afternoon, a total of $194.25 was collected by a group of charming young women who volunteered their services for the occasion.

GENEROUS SPIRIT.

Smiles of these comely young women greeted the football fans at intermission in the middle of the game when the players were resting. The collection followed a brief announcement by Herbert A. Sipser. Contributions from five cents to five dollars were made. A wonderful spirit was displayed by the spectators, all seeming anxious to help in the great cause of feeding needy kiddies.

The volunteer workers who assisted in making collections were: Evelyn Conroy, Mae McGuire, Stella Fahy, Catherine Waters, Anna Cary, Grace Moulton, Mrs. A. Irwin, Nora Lyons, Mary McArdle, Carrie J. Diehl, Helen J. Brady, Florence M. Marshall, Helen Smith and Gertrude Lawler.

Others who helped in the work included Ben Levias, Winifred Morrison, Katherine R. Mearis, Josephine O'Neil, Lydia E. Miller, Margaret W. Martin, Elizabeth C. Curran, M. Dorothy Mahoney, Mary A. Gallen, Florence McGuire Herrick, Mabel McRae, Mrs. John Luby, Louise Lyons, Margaret Murphy and Anna G. Kilton.

The girls were conveyed to Braves Field in an automobile loaned by C. Bowen Sons, Company.

CLUB CARETAKER IS KILLED BY GAS

BOSTON PAIR JAILED IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

Concord, N. H., Nov. 26.—Mrs. Gertrude Scott and Myron Bushee, both of Boston, were added to the family at the Merrimac County Jail in this city, which now shelters the largest number of inmates in many years. The new arrivals were arraigned at Lancaster for rum running and default of bail. As the Coos County Jail is closed, United States Marshal Perley B. Phillips brought them here. They were held for the next Federal Grand Jury.

THINK STUDENT MURDERED BY GLAND THIEVES

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Freeman L. Tracy, a University of Chicago student, who was found dead with a pistol ball through his head, is believed by the authorities after an all-day investigation to have been a victim of gland robbers.

The student was attacked and killed within a few blocks of where Charles Ream, a student-chauffeur, was overpowered and mutilated by an operation.

Tracy is believed to have fought desperately when attacked. He had attended a dance at the Coliseum Annex and returned home with Dan Murphy, a friend, Mrs. Murphy and her sister were in the party. When near Tracy's home he left the Murphys and started to walk the remaining blocks.

A trail of blood four blocks long led the authorities to believe Tracy had fought his attackers as he fled and was finally shot down to prevent his ever reporting the attack.

Murphy, the last man known to have seen Tracy alive, was being held as a suspect. He is foreman for an electrical company.

William Ambrose was also taken into custody and held for questioning. Ambrose formerly worked at the stock yards where Tracy was employed during the Summer.

CHECK SENT BY CURLEY

ROXBURY GIRLS ARRESTED IN LYNN RAID

Five women and three men were arrested in a raid on a house in Central avenue, Lynn, by Sergeant Charles Duggan and six patrolmen, while 1,500 persons paused on their way to church to look on.

Pretty Shirley Thompson, No. 233 Dudley street, Roxbury; Lilla Thayer, equally pretty, of No. 243 Dudley street, Roxbury, and Helen Hall, No. 493 Huntington avenue, Back Bay, were charged with disorderly conduct.

Stella Dwyer and Sadie Corcoran, middle-aged women, were arrested and charged with conducting a house of ill-repute and with violation of the true name law.

Charles Farascondola, of Bussum street, Lynn; Mustapha Kasin, Walnut street, Peabody, and Peter A. Grapova, No. 21½ Water street, Danvers, found in the house, were arrested on various charges.

Earlier in the day Sergeant Duggan, a former member of the Boston police force, and six patrolmen in plain clothes, engaged rooms in the house.

After an hour's wait, they saw the women entering the house by means of a rear fire escape.

The Dwyer woman fainted when told she was under arrest. A police matron found $77 on her person. The house is almost in the shadow of the Lynn police headquarters, and has been under observation for several days

$12,000,000 GIVEN TO COLUMBIA IN YEAR

New York, Nov. 25.—President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University announced in his annual report to the trustees that the university had received gifts of $12,725,021.50 during the year ending June 30, 1923. This is the largest total received by the university in its history.

President Butler also reported that the total resources of the four corporations included in the education al system of the university amounted at the end the fiscal year to $32,240,567.79, of which $72,799,731.38 was held by the trustees of the university itself.

The university's endowment fund now totals more than $45,000,000, ranking second to that of Harvard.

$50,000 FUR THEFT, SECOND IN NEW YORK

New York, Nov. 26.—Fur robbers continued their depredations in the 5th avenue district, smashing a rear window of the importing establishment of Leopold Haas, Inc., at 45th street and escaping with coats valued at $50,000. It was the second robbery of the firm within a few weeks, thieves recently having escaped with goods worth $10,000.

The wave of fur thefts which has caused losses of $250,000 to 5th avenue shops alone in the past few weeks, has advanced the burglary insurance rates on furs and silks 10 per cent.

Protect the Enamel

Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

That Charm

Which comes from prettier teeth

Dainty people get it now

The day when teeth were dingy has gone by now for millions. You see prettier teeth wherever you look today.

A new way of teeth cleaning has come into vogue. Dainty people the world over now employ it. You will also do so when you make this test.

That cloudy film

Your teeth are coated with a viscous film. You can feel it now. It resists the old-way brushing, so much of it clings and stays.

Food stains, etc., discolor it, then it forms dingy coats. That is why, in old days, most teeth showed less luster than now.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus very few escaped tooth troubles, despite all care.

Dental science has in late years found ways to fight that film. One disintegrates the film at all stages of formation. The other removes it without harmful scouring.

Able authorities proved these methods effective. Then a new-type tooth paste was created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent. Now careful people of some 50 nations employ it, largely by dental advice.

Also these effects

Pepsodent does two other things which research proved essential. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids.

It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

Every use of Pepsodent gives manifold effect to these great natural tooth-protecting agents. Tens to millions of homes it has brought a new dental era.

Let every child enjoy it

Pepsodent means more than prettier teeth. It means cleaner, safer teeth. Dentists advise that children use it from the time the first tooth appears. This as protection against troubles which most suffer otherwise.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear.

A few days will convince you. What you see and feel will lead you to adopt this method in your home. That is most important. Cut out coupon now.

GIRL SAYS MOTHER 'KIDNAPED' HER ON EVE OF WEDDING

New Bedford, Nov. 26. — Miss Josephine N. Cygnan, who disappeared on the eve of her wedding to Ernest Lees, has returned home with a tale of being spirited away by her parents, while her fiance is at sea out of town hunting for her.

The girl said she was forced to go to Boston with her mother, who was opposed to her marriage to Lees. She said she remained in Boston four days and four nights and was then brought back by her mother.

She says she is now ready to go ahead with the wedding. Her fiance, however, is unaware of her return.

LAWRENCE CANALS DRAWN OFF IN VAIN HUNT FOR BODY

Lawrence, Nov. 26.—The drawing off of the north and south canals under the direction of the police, and a thorough search by an organized posse of volunteers of the woods about the city, failed to reveal further clue to the whereabouts of James Sullivan, forty-eight-year-old city treasury clerk, who disappeared from his home, several days ago.

AUTO HITS FENCE AND POLE, CALLS OUT FIREMEN AND POLICE

When Philip H. Wells of No. 1250 Fellaway, Malden, riding in his automobile with his twelve-year-old son, James, crashed into a pole in Winchester, he automatically summoned firemen, police, and residents.

The automobile first crashed into a fence, when the steering buckle broke, then rebounded and struck the pole, knocking a fire alarm box attached to it to the ground. The accident caused the fire alarm to be sounded.

The disturbance of the fire alarm box from its position caused the wires of the system to cross, those of the police signal box, thus sending in a call for the police patrol wagon.

Several minutes after the accident occurred, police patrol, fire apparatus, and a large crowd of citizens were on the scene. Neither of the occupants of the automobile was hurt.

ESCAPED STATE FARM TRUSTY BELIEVED DROWNED IN RIVER

Bridgewater, Nov. 26.—One of three trusties who escaped from the State Farm here is believed by farm officials to have been drowned in the Taunton River, which he attempted to swim in a daring effort to evade his pursuers.

His companions were captured in North Middleboro a few hours after making their break for freedom.

The men, William H. Frost, 30, of Brookline; Earle Sidell, 30, of Shirley, failed to report for supper and a posse immediately went in search for them. When Frost and Sidell were taken into custody they told their captors that long had started the river-swim with them, but had failed to reach the other side.

'PUBLIC SCHOOL BOYS EXCEL AT HARVARD'

There are Harvard men—and Harvard men, which in the mind of one Harvard student means that the Harvard student body is composed of two groups: those who are graduates of private prep schools, and those who were tutored in the public schools.

The former group, according to Corliss Lamont, son of Thomas L. Lamont of the J. P. Morgan banking firm, and a member of the senior class, in a current number of the Harvard Advocate, reaps the greater part of the extra-curricular honors, while the latter group excels in scholarship.

Lamont, himself a product of Phillips Exeter, backs his assertion with convincing statistics. In his own freshman year, there were 106 private school men on the eight major teams and only 24 public school men. All the captains, except one, and all the managers were private school men.

In other activities, including the class offices, the Red Book, the musical clubs, the glee club, and the debating teams, the private school men held 119 places to twelve for the public schools.

Lamont cites similar statistics for the class throughout the four college years, showing that in what are known as "school activities," the public school man is at a disadvantage.

Of the forty men elected to Phi Beta Kappa in 1923, however, twenty-seven were public school men, and of those who graduated with honors, all but forty-one were public school men.

CLARK UNOPPOSED IN CARMEN'S ELECTION

Charles H. Clark, president of the Boston Carmens' Union, will be unopposed for re-election at today's primary of the local, to be held at the Old Franklin school house, but lively contests are expected for the offices of vice-president, business agent, and assistant secretary.

WOMAN POISONED BY GAS FUMES ILL AT HOSPITAL

Mrs. Mary Clarke, forty-three years old, of Suite 6, No. 26 Myrtle street, West End, is at Haymarket Relief Station seriously ill of gas poisoning. She was overcome in the kitchen of her home by fumes escaping from open jets in a gas stove. She was discovered unconscious by her husband, James A. Clarke. The latter called the police and the woman was removed to the hospital.

by the Veteran Motorist

LAST winter, when I was out West, a friend of mine took me up to the Illinois Athletic Club one evening, so that I might see Johnny Weissmuller put even a brook trout to shame for speed and getting through the water. You know I had never thought much of this swimming game! Like a great many other old fellows, who just used to paddle about the old swimming hole, I never thought that swimming was the sport it really is — something which takes all the speed and stamina a man can deliver.

Talk about form! Johnny Weissmuller must time every movement of his body, every stroke and kick, so that the maximum of power and speed can be delivered every second of the race. 29½ seconds for 60 yards is some swimming.

Socony Gasoline won't make your car a Johnny Weissmuller, but Socony will put any car or truck "in the swim" for efficiency in driving and hauling. It will give flash for a quick start, speed for the long pull, power to come out on top in any kind of a tough finish. Fill up with Socony Gasoline and Socony Motor Oil, and notice how the old boat "comes through".

SWISS COUNT FITCHBURG MILL HAND

Boston Consulate Guarded in Bomb Plot

COUNT IS FITCHBURG MILL HAND

Cousin of League of Nations' Secretary Is Learning to Make Paper

Fitchburg, Nov. 26.—Count von der Weide; that is the way he is entitled to write it.

Instead, he signs it Jean Weide. He is a worker in a Fitchburg paper mill. He has a number on the time clock.

His cousin, Baron Jean De Montenach, is secretary of the League of Nations, and he recently married Helen Gould, daughter of Frank J. Gould, and his former wife, now Princess Viora.

Count Weide

Yet Jean von der Weide counts his ancestry in the Swiss nobility back to the days six years after Columbus discovered the continent where Jean now labors.

The World War and consequent financial reverses sent young Jean to the country of promise. The family dropped the use of the title, count, at the outbreak of the French Revolution.

Two years ago young Jean bade his native country and his aged father good-bye and sailed for America. The first six months in this country he spent in New York and the Western States. Then he came to Fitchburg, where he obtained work with the Fitchburg Paper Co. He may be found every day at a paper-making machine, learning every detail of the business.

FINDS U. S. EGOISTIC.

"America is the greatest country in the world," young Weide told an American reporter. Though the greatest nation for business he yet believes it has too much egotism.

Von der Weide says his object in learning the paper business from the bottom in every detail is that in time he may return to his own country, obtain financial backing and establish himself in the business there.

The young nobleman is being assisted in his chosen career by George R. Wallace, Jr., son of Col. George R. Wallace, owner of the paper mill, who has evidenced a particular interest in the future of Von der Weide.

SMOKED, LOST HER JOB AND GETS ANOTHER

Teacher won't say whether she is allowed to smoke and wear knickers, unconventionalities that cost her Long Island school position.

MISS DOROTHY SCHOLZE

New York, Nov. 26.—Dorothy Scholze, schoolmistress of Orient, L. I., who preferred resignation from the school post to the abandonment of what she deemed her womanly perogatives, the right to wear knickerbockers and smoke cigarettes, says that she has procured another teaching position.

It was only by chance that a reporter encountered Dorothy, as she has been keeping herself in seclusion in Greenwich Village since her resignation from the Orient school.

The reporter was walking down the aisle of the Church of the Ascension, and there, in a pew, kneeling on a prayer mat, was the bobbed-hair instructress.

Reluctantly she doled out the news that she had received a new position. But as to where, "Somewhere in the State of Connecticut" was all she volunteered. Would she forego there the right she had insisted on in Orient? A vague smile was the only answer.

BREAD GOES UP AS FLOUR GOES DOWN

Saving Habit Also Affecting Market for America's Crop of Wheat

Washington, Nov. 26.—Needless continuation of bread-saving habits formed in wartime, Department of Agricultural officials declared in a statement issued today, is limiting American wheat consumption to the disadvantage of both producer and consumer.

A return to pre-war food habits in the use of wheat by the public and the feeding of low grade wheat to live stock, department experts assert, would help greatly toward solving the wheat problem.

The wide disparity between the cost of bread to the consumer and the price received by the producer for the wheat from which it is made is cited by the department as a typical illustration of the disproportionate relationship which exists between the price of farm products and the price of things that have gone through manufacturing process.

"The price of bread in cities has not fallen with the price of wheat and flour," says the statement.

"A pound loaf of bread which in Minneapolis in 1913-14 cost 5.3 cents now costs approximately 9 cents, while the flour which in 1913-14 cost $4.43 a barrel, now costs $6.89. Allowing 280 loaves to the barrel, the margin between the flour price and the bread price has increased from $10.40 to $18.30.

"It is obvious that such conditions work to the disadvantage of both producers and consumers. Producers are injured by the restrictions which is caused in the demand and consumers are injured by high prices which enforce an uneconomic limitation in the use of an internal food. All interests in the country, including those of the bakers and millers, would be benefited by the restoration of a more normal ratio between the price of wheat when it leaves the farmers' hands and its price to the final consumer."

PHYSICIAN SUES ACTRESS FOR $21,000

New York, Oct. 26.—The trial of the suit for $21,000 brought by a New York physician for professional services against Doris Keane, the actress, will be in New York County, having been ordered from Ulster County by the Supreme Court.

Dr. Charles F. A. Locks, the plaintiff, charges that Miss Keane rebbed him from Paris in 1923 asking that he come to her at once. He turned over his entire New York practice to another physician, he says, and went to perform an operation upon Miss Keane in Paris.

When he arrived, she changed her mind, he says gave him only $1,000 for his expenses, and went to London in search of another physician.

OUTRAGES LAID TO REDS

Communists, in Protest Over Fascisti, Blamed for the Explosions in Philadelphia

The bomb outrages which wrecked the Italian and Spanish consulates in Philadelphia have led to the placing of heavy guards around the Italian consulate in Boston and in other cities in the East.

The bombing is believed to have been perpetrated by Communists in protests against the recent Fascisti agreements between Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy and General Prince Rivera, dictator of Spain.

Washington dispatches announce that immediate steps are being taken to investigate the Philadelphia outrages. Six young Spaniards, believed to represent the international anti-Fascisi, are sought by the authorities as suspects.

Information volunteered by a Philadelphia taxicab driver may lead to arrests. He told the authorities of seeing three youthful Spaniards, one of whom carried a package resembling that left on the steps of the Spanish consulate in Philadelphia.

Startled by the driver's cry, "Taxi, sir?" the man dropped the box, but caught it before it struck the pavement. Before arising the Spaniard made the sign of the Cross, while the others nervously cursed him.

TWO MEN DROP DEAD IN GARAGES

Carl Marshall, thirty-five years old, of No. 3 Garland street, Everett, died as he was cranking his automobile in his garage at No. 114 Harvard street, Everett. His little son, Carl Jr., who was in the machine at the time, summoned neighbors. A physician was called and found death due to heart disease.

Elmer E. Slocum, sixty one, of No. 8 Pine avenue, Winthrop, prominent Christian Scientist, dropped dead from heart trouble in the garage in the rear of his home. He had just returned from the theatre with his wife.

ALLEGED THIEF CAUGHT IN CHASE

James Donovan, alleged pickpocket, was arrested by Inspectors Michael Kelley and Benjamin Alexander after a chase of several blocks on Huntington avenue. He was booked as a vagabond. The police say he had a long record. The attention of the inspectors was turned on Donovan when, they say, they observed him mingling suspiciously among the crowds near Symphony Hall, where they were on duty.

CAMBRIDGE CRIME WAVE STIRS READING TO ACTION

Aroused by the wave of lawlessness and crime in East Cambridge, ending in street fights and bootleg feuds, Dist. Atty. Arthur K. Reading of Middlesex county is contemplating the calling of a special grand jury session to probe and cleanup the district. This report follows the murder of John C. Galvin, 28, of No. 474 Windsor st., Cambridge, slain by gangsters after being robbed. Police are seeking his assailants throughout East Cambridge and early arrests are looked for.

DRIVER KILLED IN RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

Martin Malley, fifty-six years old, of No. 49 Middle street, South Boston, was fatally injured when a team of horses he was driving on B street, South Boston, ran away and hurled him to the ground.

Malloy suffered a fractured left leg and serious injuries about the head and body. He died at City Hospital.

TINHKAM BILL ASKS ANTI-SALOON PROBE

Washington, Nov. 26.—A resolution calling for appointment by the House of Representatives of a committee of seven to investigate the activities and methods of the Anti-Saloon League of America will be introduced by Representative George Holden Tinkham of Massachusetts, at the opening of the coming session of Congress.

Tinkham asserts the Anti Saloon League has, without a public accounting, "raised and expended vast sums of money to influence public opinion," and to control elections throughout the United States.

20 ARE KILLED, 77 WOUNDED, IN HUNTING ACCIDENTS

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 26.—More persons were killed or wounded by the accidental discharge of firearms during the 1923 hunting season than by any other means, according to a report of the conservation commission covering the season to November 15. A total of twenty persons were killed and seventy-seven wounded, the report said, and of these five were killed and thirty wounded by accidental discharge of firearms.

"She admired my hat," said Laurel.

HOW THE STORY STARTED

Stella Dallas and her husband, Stephen, do not live together. They have a daughter, thirteen years old, named Laurel, who stays most of the year with the mother. These two are now at a Summer hotel in New England, where the other guests look askance at the painted, overdressed elderly woman. Then comes the time for Laurel to visit her father in New York.

By OLIVE HIGGINS PROUTY

Author of "Bobbie, General Manager," "The Fifth Wheel," "The Star in the Window," Etc.

THE hotel guests seated near Laurel and her mother observed their traveling clothes. One of them later, in the hotel lobby, approached Laurel as she sat, half-hidden in a high-backed armchair, waiting for her mother. Her neat black-enameled suitcase stood beside her, and her silver-handled umbrella lay across her knees.

"Are you and your mammar leaving us today?" asked the lady.

"I am," Laurel replied.

"But not your mammar?"

Laurel wished she wouldn't say "mammar."

"No. Mother isn't."

"Oh, so that's it! You're going alone! And where are you going?"

"To New York."

"To New York! How nice! To visit, I suppose?"

Laurel nodded.

"Let's see. I believe I've heard your pappar lives in New York," remarked the lady. Any reference to her father always put Laurel on the defensive. "Doesn't your pappar live there?" the lady persisted.

"I call him father," said Laurel, flushing.

"You funny child! Well, doesn't your father live in New York?"

"My father has business in New York which takes him there frequently," Laurel replied as she had heard her mother reply dozens of times before.

"Oh, I see! And you're going to New York to visit your father. Is that it?" purred the lady.

There were sharp claws behind that purr, Laurel knew. Also she knew that it was not customary for little girls to visit their fathers alone. So now she replied, "No, I'm going to visit a hotel."

"But you'll see your father, of course!"

It appeared quite legitimate. Laurel had long ago discovered, for grown-up people to ask questions of a child which they'd never think of asking each other. Therefore, she decided, it was legitimate for children to remain silent when they chose. Of course she wasn't a little child who might refuse to speak and not mean to be rude, but if people would keep on asking questions as if she were only six, she would keep on being silent. She was silent now. She closed her lips firmly, and from beneath her long bang stared blankly across the lobby. The lady repeated her question.

"You'll see your father, won't you?"

Laurel continued her blank stare. Her eyes took on a vacant, far-away expression, as if she had suddenly fallen to day-dreaming, and was thousands of miles away from the hotel lobby and the lady. In reality she was keenly conscious of the moment and the place, and was keenly suffering, too. Laurel didn't like being rude. She would like to answer every question ever asked her. Only she couldn't always. People nudged, and smiled, and raised their eyebrows sometimes.

"Well," said the lady, less sweetly now, "I'm sure your mother will miss you, whomever you're going to see, for she doesn't seem to have made many intimate friends in the hotel."

How unkind! How cruel! It swept over Laurel that she would like to make up a face at this woman—this hateful, ugly woman. (She was ugly. She had a complexion like dough. Beside her mother's rose-petal cheeks, hers were like toadstools. Beside her mother's bright hair, hers was like dull pewter.) Laurel glowered at the lady's retreating back. She had perfectly enormous hips!

"What was Mrs. Lamson saying, kiddie?" asked Laurel's

BACK PANEL DETAIL OF THE AMERICAN'S SUPERNEUTRODYNE SET

SKETCH OF LAYOUT SHOWN

Arrangement of the Detector, Audio-Frequency Amplifier and Jack

The Boston American prints today the final article on the building of the superneutrodyne.

Reports of further experimenting with this remarkable circuit, and the replies to questions of those who are building it, will be published from day to day, however.

The layout of the rest of the receiver is shown in an accompanying phantom sketch.

The part of the circuit shown today is practically nothing more than a detector and two stage amplifier, and the wiring layout should be familiar to anyone who has built a set before.

The back-panel sketch is, however, a view of the parts laid out according to the panel dimensions that was published in Friday's paper, and according to the wiring diagram shown in Wednesday's paper. These two should be consulted as well as the sketches of today and Saturday when building the set.

The Boston American is interested in having every one who attempts to build this set get the very best receiver.

The hookup is not a freak one that will work sometimes and not others. American experts have built several of these receivers, experimented with many others, and reports of still more that have been successfully built are coming in daily.

They have proved that this is not a critical set to build, and that success is not difficult if reasonable care is used.

If you have any difficulty, however, the radio editor will be glad to help in every way possible. Send your queries in by mail, addressed to the radio editor, and they will be answered either personally, or on the radio page. Some questions may be new ones, and it may be necessary to check up on the answers by actual experiment, so that there may be a few days' delay in replying. But we will do the best possible.

Also the editor would like to hear from those who have built the set whether they have any difficulties or not. Send along a list of the stations you get.

PHANTOM SKETCH OF SUPER

DRAWING OF SUPERNEUTRODYNE

The above drawing completes the sketch of the back-panel layout of the Boston American's superneutrodyne. The battery binding posts may be mounted on a piece of bakelite 2¼ by 6½ inches, supported underneath the second socket.

PREPARES FOR RECORD BOOM IN BUILDING DURING 1924

Mr. and Mrs. Average Rentpayer, tired of paying a steadily increasing monthly toll to Mr. Landlord, have decided to build a home of their own. Months have been spent in discussing the size and arrangement of the various rooms, the exact location and number of the closets and the numerous other details of arrangements. Not until every other problem has been decided upon is a thought given to the lumber to be used in the home.

Hundreds of the genus "Average Rentpayer" throughout Metropolitan Boston and hundreds of thousands throughout the United States did just that very thing last year, and probably an even greater number will do exactly the same thing next year and the year after, and for years after that.

For according to one of Boston's biggest lumber dealers, J. Edward Downes, proprietor of Downes Lumber Company, the first the average man thinks of lumber is when he wants to build. Then his problem is "Can I get the kind o flumber I want, and if so, where?"

LUMBER INDUSTRY CHANGED.

Like many other lines of business the lumber industry has undergone great changes since the World War. Before the war building proceeded at a more or less regular pace. The war speeded up the industry, but the high prices of the boom years following the armistice, caused a tremendous slump in building. Along in 1922 nearly everybody started to build and the record breaking pace has been steadily maintained with prospects that 1924 will see more building, especially home building, than any previous year in history.

"For many years we have had a slogan, 'Every size and every kind,'" said Mr. Downes, "and we have built up our business because builders and others have learned to depend upon us for quick and satisfactory service.

"But does the average man realize just what it means to be able to give this service?" He does not," declares Mr. Downes.

"Little does the average man realize when he calls for spruce timber, that months before his need for this stock was apparent, men were spending the Winter months in the woods felling spruce trees, which were logged and sawn in the Spring, and when the ice broke up in the harbors and rivers way up North, were loaded in enormous quantities on to vessels for shipment to various conveniently located wharves. After the vessel has been unloaded, every piece of timber is inspected, graded and piled according to length, each length in a separate pile, so that there is no waste to the consumer when definite sizes are ordered."

SPRUCE USED FOR PULP.

Most of the spruce now being used in Boston comes from Canada, principally Nova Scotia, as most of the Maine spruce is being used for pulp. This use of millions of feet of spruce for pulp annually is one of the reasons for its higher price, declares Mr. Downes. Another is that freight is more, particularly by rail, and the hauls longer. Only recently a cargo from Labrador was unloaded, a distance three times greater than to Nova Scotia.

Because of the great increase in the consumption of spruce for pulp and other uses, Western fir is being substituted in almost 50 per cent. of the cases where formerly spruce would have been used exclusively. The Federal government has put its seal of approval upon fir as having practically the same characteristics as spruce. Test of some Oregon fir have shown it almost as strong as South ern hard pine.

WESTERN FIR VIA PANAMA CANAL.

Most of the Western Fir which formerly came into Boston by rail is now being shipped via the Panama Canal. The saving in the freight charges now makes this lumber a keen competitor of Eastern pine for all building purposes, and especially for timbers, floor joists and scantling

In order to insure against any shortage of these popular building lumbers, millions of feet are kept on hand in the Roxbury yard of the Downes Lumber Company, and deliveries of additional millions of feet are scheduled in order to keep a sufficient stock on hand during the rush of the building season so immediate deliveries can be made to Boston home builders.

For factory construction and for other large buildings the lumber generally used is known as Merchantable Long Leaf Hard Pine shipped here by vessels from the South. The best of this hard pine at present comes from Florida.

SOME TIMBERS WEIGH TON.

Because of the huge size of these long leaf hard pine timbers—many of which weigh a ton or more—it is necessary to use the most modern means of handling to expedite un loading and storage. At the Downes Lumber Company yard and wharves at No. 412 Albany street, an electrically operated derrick is used both in unloading these timbers from the vessels and in loading them on trucks for delivery.

The inside finish in most of the one and two-family houses built today is of North Carolina Pine. There are only a few dealers in this city who handle N. C. Pine in complete ship cargoes. The Downes Lumber Company has built a tremendous business in this lumber because it regularly buys N. C. Pine in lots of a half-million feet and more at very low prices. As a result the Downes Company is furnishing N. C. Pine to many interior finish mills than any other lumber dealer in New England.

UNLOADS HALF MILLION FEET.

Only this week the barge "Estelle" unloaded 500,000 feet of finest quality N C. Pine in all sizes at the third Downes wharf at Nos 518-522 Albany street. This lumber comes into this market rough, and much of it is manufactured to definite in the Downes Company's down mill before delivery.

To insure satisfactory lumber for flooring, sheathing and shiving, jars, completely enclosed sheds and air-tight compartments have been erected to keep this lumber dry and away from dampness. These sheds are located at Nos. 462 to 498 Harrison avenue. A complete stock of flooring, including oak, hard pine, maple and beech is carried at this yard.

Red cedar shingles are also kept under cover, and large sheds are utilized for the storage of the immense quantities of asphalt shingles carried in stock. One big shed contains a large assortment of wall board and Sheet Rock. As New England agents for the well-known Compo Board, thousands of feet are kept on hand at all times.

MACHINERY OF LATEST TYPE.

The mechanical equipment for the manufacturing of lumber to the sizes, shapes and styles specified, is the very latest type designed to give quick and most efficient service. A large fleet of gasoline and electric trucks is employed in maintaining delivery service in keeping with the splendid service of the storage and manufacturing divisions.

"Our customers have been taught to expect satisfactory service as to quality of lumber and quick delivery," declares Mr. Downes, "Sometimes it seems almost impossible to handle all the calls as they should be, but our organization knows that every man is expected to stand up and prove his worth in emergencies. And it is gratifying to know that they almost always do."

AIR MADE PURE BY SENTRY CRYSTALS

Production experts who have been accustomed to expect a decrease in average production per-employe with the coming of cold weather are evincing great interest in a new, simple and inexpensive, yet effective method of overcoming this decrease by providing a constant supply of pure, fresh, invigorating air for factories, stores offices and homes.

All authorities agree on the desirability of plenty of fresh air. During warm weather open windows solve the problem. When colder weather necessitates keeping windows closed, production suffers because of colds and lassitude directly due to breathing vitiated and impure air.

NEW WAY FOUND.

Science has now come to the rescue with a method for purifying and revitalizing the air of a room without the necessity of actually changing the air itself.

This method is an adaptation of Nature's way, is extremely simple. Just as flowers, trees and other growing things act as Nature's filtration plant in extracting poisonous gases from the air, so this new method has been devised to utilize evaporable crystals called "Sentry Crystals," which purify and revitalize air that has become impure and odious.

FIRM, HARMLESS GAS.

When these Sentry crystals are exposed to free contact with air, a fragrant, but harmless gas is formed. This gas, being heavier than air, drops first to the lowest point in the room, literally forcing the impure air up while forming a chemical combination with and neutralizing the poisonous gases and odors. This process continues from six to eight hours, until the crystals have entirely evaporated.

These crystals may be used anywhere without danger of damage to furniture, fabrics or other materials.

PREVENT ASPHYXIATION.

One of the most interesting developments which the Sentry Crystal gives promise of is the evident ability to remove the asphyxiation dangers of the deadly carbon monoxide gas resulting from the exhaust of gasoline engines. This is of particular interest because of the increasing number of deaths which have resulted from autoists being caught in closed garages.

The use of these Sentry Crystals it is believed will result in obviating all danger in the home of asphyxiation from coal gas, illuminating gas, or through the exhaustion of the oxygen in closed rooms where gas is used for fuel or illumination.

The development of Sentry Crystals is the work of a Boston organization, Sentry Products Company, of No. 68 Devonshire street.

GREEK-ITALIN DISPUTE U TO JURISTS

Geneva, Nov. 26.—Removal of disputes in the vocenant of the League of Nations in the objection practice of eminent jurists who began here today under the auspices of a decision made at the September assembly of the League when Italy maintained the council did not apply in the controversy with Greece over the massacre of Italian officers and the subsequent bombardment of Corfu.

The question was adjusted when Italy agreed to the declaration and dispute between members of the League liable to lead to separate war within the sphere of action of the League.

Simultaneously, the council framed five questions to get clear exact definition of the covenant, it was these questions the jurists had before them today. Their report will be submitted to the League council Dec 10

The principal question refers to the Italian Greek dispute.

Italy argued that the Greek government was responsible in issuing the massacre of Italian officers at Janina because no steps had been taken to safeguard missions and should have afforded suitable protection to the Italian boundary mission. Greek authority on international law, contends that it was absurd to try to hold state responsible for political crimes committed within their borders

Determined to get legal decision on this question the council compiled this query: In what circumstances and to what extent is the responsibility of a state involved by the commission of a political crime in its territory

U. S. GAINS $30,000 IN SCRAPPING OSHIPS

Washington, Nov. 26.—Work already done at the New York and Philadelphia navy yards in the scrapping of four uncompleted vessels on their ways under treaty limiting naval armaments indicates that the abandonment of work on these yards will yield improvement about $30,000 more than it would have been received if the ships had been sold for the highest responsible bids made by civilian shipping. Bids on six more condemned battleships will be opened this week.

DEMOCRATS IN TAX FIGHT TO BE NON-PARTISAN

Washington, Nov. 26.—Readiness of the Democrats in the House to put aside partisanship in dealing with the question of tax deductions was announced in a formal statement by Representative Garrett of Tennessee, minority leader.

The position of the Democrats on this and other important legislative issues before the new Congress was outlined after a conference between Garrett, National Chairman Cordell Hull, who returns to the House after being defeated for one term, and Representative John N. Garner of Texas, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee. Representative Garrett said:

"Let's be done with partisanship in dealing with the twin question of revenue and finance, except as to the present iniquitous high tariff, which is constantly boosting the high cost of living and breeding countless profiteers. The tariff will continue in politics so long as greed insists on dictating extortionate and unconscionable high rates

"The Democrats will at every stage and upon every important question pursue a sound, constructive course

"Nor will considerations of mere temporary partisan advantage tempt the Democratic membership to play cheap or mean politics at the expense of the people, as did the Republicans during 1919 and 1920."

YALE AND CORNELL SIT ON TOP OF THE FOOTBALL WORLD

BEST TEAMS IN THE EAST

By NICK FLATLEY

Yale and Cornell are now parked on the football pinnacle, and, let those who will, pick a champion from the pair. The Blue closed New Haven's greatest modern year in soggy but dramatic glory Saturday, and Blue supporters, having licked Harvard and Princeton decisively in the same season, will not worry much about any mythical honors.

The big Blue machine and Gil Dobie's bone crushers seem to be evenly matched, according to the dope, which doesn't mean a thing. Neither was pushed to any great extent this season, though the Elis were obliged to crawl up from the rear, on several occasions. They always had more than enough power for that little stunt.

Earl Evans

Times finally have changed at Yale, it would seem. The Blue team went after Harvard as though victory already had been won. The eleven had a wonderful confidence and a wonderful collection of stuff to back it up.

Even through the sodden, swampy stretches of the Stadium one could get an idea, now and then, of the irresistible driving force of the Ted Jones backs. By the same token, it was evident that a Harvard assault, with plenty of speed and precision, had been developed.

It may be that the Elis would have triumphed under any conditions. They had the class. They won when their usual Harvard luck was right on the job—at the beginning—and deserve all the more credit therefor.

There's not the least doubt that the rain and storm gave Harvard a wonderful edge. It erased all the advantages of the Yale backfield, it made Hammond, a great kicker, just as powerful as the whole lot of Eli's fleet mercurys.

Despite that jolt at the start you could see that Yale intended to win. The invaders were more alert than their historic foes. They fumbled in the opening period, in a fashion that would have been more than disastrous in other years. But Harvard had changed. The Blue boys always managed to submarine into the lakes and come up with the slimy ball.

Then, when Harvard's first fumble arrived, Yale was waiting. Ducky Pond's moist parade ended that football game. Had he been stopped, the eventual score would have been nothing to nothing. But Fate finally smiled on Yale. And it was time.

That game will never be forgotten by any of the throng who watched. There never was a gridiron clash just like it. The drab, dripping figures barely seen down there through the driving rain and the haze, the murky mountains that marked the course of each play, the mud blinded athletes merged ghostlike with their shadows in the lagoons, all went to make up a new sport epic.

• • •

It will become as famous in gridiron lore as Mrs. Murphy's cow on the night of the big wind is in general circles. It wasn't football, but it was something different from what had ever gone before.

Widdy Neale

The world is indeed sport mad, when more than 50,000 will sit through the worst of New England's November afternoons, and have a good time doing it.

Boston College and Holy Cross now step onto the stage, all by themselves. Their annual collision Saturday will attract the greater part of the universe, according to the signs. Both teams have come down to this battle gradually gaining headway. Either one, just now, could walk into a struggle with any kind of a champion, with an even chance of emerging on the long end.

• • •

Both teams have real stars, chaps who rate All-America classification if anybody ever did. It's extremely doubtful if there ever was a better kicker in the game than Chuck Darling, the Eagle booter. And few ends ever had anything on Hilary Mahaney, the large, young man who covers one of the wings for the Purple.

SEASON CLIMAX AT WIGWAM SATURDAY

The Boston College eleven's big week is here and on Saturday the Eagle team will battle Holy Cross. The teams face each other with only one defeat on each record.

Tom Keady, whose Vermont team held the Eagle to a scoreless tie Saturday, B. C. and Holy Cross are evenly matched. Vermont played the Purple early in the season and was defeated, 16-0.

The annual Purple-Maroon tussle is the closing classic of the gridiron season.

The score promises to be about the same as last year.

The Eagle has 'Chuck' Darling, who has distinguished himself in every game this Fall. Darling's last achievement was his wonderful exhibition of head work in the Vermont game, when his lack of nerves prevented Vermont from winning the game by a safety.

Edward Coleman

Darling's punting also featured Saturday's aquatic meet with the Green Mountaineers, as he continually outdistanced Yarnell of the visitors and kept the ball safely out of B. C territory.

The Eagle line showed up poorly Saturday, but with all the regulars back in uniform this week will present its full strength which it has lacked for nearly a month. Koslowsky and Dunbar, the husky tackles, have been ill for more than a week, but the last trace of their trouble has left, and they will join the squad today in the final preparation for the objective game of the season.

Larkin, who was injured in the Centenary game, is in shape, as well as McManus and Beaver, regular guards, who, although they threw their canes away about a week ago, have been kept on the sidelines out of danger.

The greatest gain, and, Darling aside, the strength of the Eagle offense, will appear to be "Plaster" Ward, never in his life before inactive, will more than make up for his idleness when he grasps the pigskin for the first time in five weeks.

Ward's case may be compared with Glennon's of Holy Cross. The Purple flash was put out in the Vermont game a few weeks ago and has been resting comfortably in hospital ever since. This week will see him in action, and he boasts to suit. Ward in achievement.

MEDFORD AND MALDEN IN BIG GAME ON HOLIDAY

By FRED C. LANE.

Final preparation for the big Thanksgiving Day games is now in order with the schoolboy coaches.

Stress will be placed on the training, both physical and mental, for the three days previous to the big event on the schedule of almost every schoolboy eleven.

To some the contest on Turkey Day means meeting a traditional rival, to others a championship. To Medford it means both, for a victory on Thursday means not only a victory over their ancient rival, Malden, but the undisputed championship of the Suburban League.

A Malden victory means a tie.

This contest seems the best scholastic contest in this part of the State. As the rivalry grows keener each year the spectators increase in numbers.

Tickets for this contest were put on sale early last week and not one is to be had except from speculators who managed to get "in again" this year.

On past performances, Medford is picked to win. Their record with the exception of the Brockton game is without a scratch. The play has improved in every game and now they are the most finished scholastic eleven in these parts.

Malden looked sure to win at the start of the season, but since the Haverhill game have shown a complete reversal of form. They have been tied by teams in the league that are rated inferior. They failed to take advantage of the opportunities.

Medford looks for big results from Dick Phelan, drop kicker and pivot player. His toe has enabled Medford to hold the position they now enjoy. Not only is he the best drop kicker in the Suburban League but he is a sterling player in the line.

The storm Saturday raised havoc with the North Shore League football schedule. None of the five games scheduled was played and it looks very much as though all but the most important will be abandoned.

Peabody and Lynn Classical will not meet until after Thanksgiving.

The Huntington school swimming schedule for the season is as follows: January 18, Malden High; January 26 at Worcester Academy; February 1, Newton; February 8, at Andover Academy; February 15, Brookline; February 21, English High; March 1, at Exeter Academy.

Norwood High will bring on the champions of New Jersey for a game on Saturday. Coach Murray's eleven have proved themselves one of the most successful independent school teams in the State.

STEINEKE SURE HE'LL BEAT ZBYSZKO

Hans Steineke, seeker after American wrestling honors, will step through the ropes in Mechanics Building on Thursday night confident as any man can be that he will prove the master of Waldek Zbyszko, whom he meets in the main event of Promoter Tuohey's all-star International carnival.

With his 265 pounds of finely developed muscle, backed by rare wrestling skill Steineke appears to be the most formidable opponent "Zibby" has faced in Boston in a long time.

Steineke, in spite of his great size, is fast and aggressive, and as he has weight, height and power on the Pole the latter must uncover every whit of his skill if he hopes to avert defeat.

The appearance of both Dr. Feodor Stejke, of Norway, and of Richard Schikat, the all-European champion in an exhibition of their skill promises a rare treat for lovers of scientific wrestling. Both are giants in size, but of extreme speed and cleverness.

Renato Gardini is ripe for the battle of his life in the semi-final, when he meets Reggie Siki, the Abyssinian. They battled to a terrific draw at Cambridge last Spring and both want to have it out for keeps

Slow Motion Pictures Helped Yale to Win

Slow motion pictures played an important part in Yale's victory over Harvard in the mud-soaked stadium on Saturday.

Two years ago a New Haven resident by the name of Phelps approached Tad and urged the Yale mentor to utilize the slow motion cameras as an aid to football development.

Jones was impressed by the sincerity of Phelps' convictions regarding the practical value of the machines and gave him the contract to attend to all Yale football filming.

Using machines that slow down ordinary movements of the human body to one-fifth their original speed, Phelps' machines, one of them a motor-driven device, proved of intense worth from the very start.

In dummy tackling practice, in scrimmages between the scrubs and varsity, in drop-kicking and in every other feature of an ordinary college practice routine, the slow motion camera was always on hand to record the faults and teach the correct method.

At night, instead of the usual skull sessions and blackboard talks, the pictures were flashed on the screen. The players were shown their faults vividly, even the minor defects which are hidden from the eye of an observer as teams are in the thick of scrimmaging.

Yale's wonderful execution of shift plays throughout the season has been freely commented upon and praised. Mallory's improvement as a kicker, the improvement of Yale's interference—all these can be attributed in large measure to slow motion pictures.

Of course it is not possible to declare that any team in the country which uses the slow motion camera as a coaching aid will develop the teamwork of Yale's great 1923 eleven. But Ted Jones' oral evidence convinces one that a slow motion camera, intelligently applied, can drive home lessons and simplify

ARENA OPENING ON STURDAY NGHT

Three canal amateur skating champions Mrs. Theresa Weld Blanchard, national women's single champion; Maxwell Hedgar, national men's single title holder and N. W. Niles, who with Mrs. Blanchard hold the national doubles title, will appear at the opening of the Arena on Saturday night.

Members of the Back Bay Skating Club at the Boston Skating Club will come also.

The one and Darling team of its class, Willis Frick of Cincinnati, one of the greatest exhibition skaters the world in his famous cradle dance, and Charley Jewtraw of Lake Placid, N. Y., international ateur champion, and Miss Gladys Robinson of Toronto, Ont., who has the same title for women, in one against the best amateur pairs in New England, are also open program.

The two local club hockey teams, the B. A. A. Boston Hockey Club and the A. A., the new team made of Canadians, will play

Marston May Compete in Bermuda Golf Title Tourney

With the completion of the famous Mid Ocean Golf Club located at Tucker's Town, near St. George, on the eastern extremity of the Island, Bermuda now boasts of two of the finest golf courses in this part of of the world. The Riddell's Ray Golf and Country Club in Warwick Parish, near Hamilton, has been in commission for the last ten years, and will this year be the scene of the first annual Bermuda championship, in which many of the leading American amateurs will compete.

Max Marston

The tournament will be held January 14 to 18.

TRADE SCHOOL TEAM BATTLES MECHANICS

Trade clashed with Mechanic Arts at Braves Field this afternoon. The annual affair is known as the title game between the technical schools of the city. Trade represents the District league, while Mechanic Arts represents the Hub league.

Trade won last year, 6 to 0, and 12 to 0 the year before.

YOUNG STRIBLING, FAVORITE FOR BOUT WITH EAGAN TONIGHT

SOUTHERN STAR IN BIG TEST

By JACK CONWAY

Young Stribling, who gained international fame in the dear old fistic racket when he held Mike McTigue to a draw at Columbus, Ga., will parade into action with Joe Eagan of Dorchester as an opponent in a ten-round bout at the Arena A. C.'s show at the Boston Arena tonight.

Stribling says he will prove to Boston and New England fans that his draw with McTigue was no fluke and that he didn't require any aid from the crowd to help influence the referee in his ruling.

The youthful Southern ring sensation has been in Boston since Wednesday. He has proved he hasn't anything to conceal from the public by working out at Kelly & Hayes' gym each day. Those who have seen Stribling in action have been greatly impressed by his work.

If Stribling frankly admits that his son is not a perfect boxer, while he says the youngster still has something to learn about the fine points of the game. He points with pride to the fact that the boy has improved with each fight. The fact he's also only nineteen years of age and is rapidly putting on weight also means that in due time he will be swapping blows with the heavyweigh contenders.

If Stribling wins over Eagan to night an effort will be made to secure Johnny Wilson or Harry Greb to meet him in a contest in this city.

EAGAN'S EXPERIENCE SURE TO BOTHER STRIBLING.

Anybody who thinks the Macon high schoolboy has a sure thing win ahead of him tonight is due for a rude awakening. While his writer believes Stribling will not go down to defeat, we figure Eagan will give him plenty of opposition.

Eddie Mack's protege is of the opinion he can trounce Stribling Confidence is about nine-tenths the battle in Joe's case. If the Dorchester middleweight believes he is up against too tough opposition, he is certain to lose. But when he gets an idea he has it on the other fellow, he is a difficult boxer to defeat.

And Eagan is of the opinion the can win over Stribling. He does not believe the Southern youth has had enough experience. Joe is so confident of winning that he's already talking of meeting Mike McTigue in New York and giving Stribling a return tussle in Atlanta.

As the rival boxers are in the best of condition, neither will be in a position to offer an alibi if defeated.

Eddie Williams of East Boston will colidcew ith Red Watson of New colinds with Red Watson of New rounds. Another eight-session affair will feature Eddie Waters of this city and Kid Green of Memphis. Frank Curry of Nashville and Terry Parker of the South End are also billed for eight sessions.

WARD'S LEFT HOOK BETTER THAN THAT OF WHITE.

Charley White of Chicago, who in his day was one of the greatest punchers the lightweight division has produced, always did his heavy execution with a smashing left hook to the jaw. This blow did not travel more than six inches. It enabled him to knock out some of the world's greater lightweights

We have seen White send eight or ten men to sleep with this deadly smash. We always marveled at the power and quickness with which the Chicago man got over the big wallop.

George Ward, sensational New Jersey welterweight who clashes with Jock Malone of St. Paul in one of the ring classics of the year at the Suffolk A. A.'s show at the Boston Arena tomorrow night, has an even faster right hook than White. It also has greater power behind it than White's heavy sock.

Ward is one of the few fighters who is able to knock an opponent out with a left hook. The blow does not travel more than six inches, yet there is enough weight behind it to drop even heavy middleweights. It is a real "sneak punch."

MALONE WILL HAVE TO KEEP ON HIS GUARD.

Jock Malone, one of the fastest boxers in the world, will have to keep on his guard to prevent this deadly blow from crashing to its mark. Jock won't be as sure of himself as he was in his winning battles here with Mickey Walker, Lou Bogash, Pal Reed, Johny Griffith and Panama Joe Gans if Ward is able to count with this blow. Malone will go down just as some of Ward's other opponents did if the New Jersey man scores with this wallop.

It will also be interesting to see how Malone fares at close quarters. His infighting has given him the edge on some of the heavy, slow fellows he has met here. Will he show to such good advantage with a flash like Ward sharpshooting punches

Jack Conway Picks Stribling to Win Over Eagan

Jack Conway, holder of world's record for picking winners, hands out the following "dope" on tonight's Arena A. C. show at the Boston Arena. He says:

"Joe Eagan and young Stribling should furnish a ragged battle. It will be a case of the Southern boy's youth, speed and punching power against Eagan's skill and experience.

"It is a difficult bout to dope. We are stringing along with Stribling, but wouldn't be surprised if Eagan upset the dope. Joe is a difficult man to defeat when he figures he has the edge on the other fellow. And Joe thinks he will outstep Stribling."

Jack has picked 137 winners out of a possible 160.

MALONE OUT TO BEAT WARD'S SNEAK PUNCH

By RINGSIDE.

"Hello, everybody!"

"How's everything along Tremont street?" continued this colorful fighting man.

"They tell me Johnny Wilson has made quite a hit in his come-back," continued Jock. "That makes him the next bird I shall go after. Can wallop Wilson easily. All I ask is the chance to get into a ring with him

"As for Harry Greb, if he makes 160 pounds at 3 o'clock for your humble servant, I shall be the middleweight champion.

"I am ready for my clash with George Ward. I have trained harder for this match than for any I have ever engaged in. I figure I should defeat George, but Nate Lewis, my manager, has tipped me I'll have to travel faster than ever to do so.

"Nate seems to think Ward is a second Stanley Ketchel. He says this youngster is coming along so rapidly that he's liable to pop my eyes out with left hooks. I told Nate he was nuts and will prove my contention tomorrow night.

"Of course I know Ward has scored twin victories over Mickey Walker and Eddie Shevlin. But I'm Jock Malone. And I'm unbeatable.

"Haven't I tossed Mickey Walker, Pal Reed, Lou Bogash, Johnny Griffith and Panama Joe Ganes for losses in Boston rings? Why should I get shell shock merely because Ward happens to be in the midst of a wild winning streak? They tell me he has a sneak punch which he likes to shoot over at the ball. I'll tell the world I'll take the sneak punch out of Ward."

Malone then murmured something about the wonderful seven per cent. beer they sell out in Chicago and then hurried to a local gym where he was billed to engage in a light workout just to make sure that he retains his razor edge condition.

Ward was due to arrive in town late tonight.

The New Jersey welterweight reports he is in wonderful physical condition. He plans to set a furious pace from the time the bell sounds in the opening round. By carrying the battle to Malone, he believes he will have a better chance of winning.

Incidentally, it is not believed that Malone will be able to fix up [illegible] as the around like an eel when in the clinches?

There won't be anything fancy about the meeting between Pal Reed, Natick middleweight, and Lou Bogash of Bridgeport at the Commercial A. C.'s show at Mechanics building on Friday night. It will be a regular two-fisted fight which is what the fans like to see. Neither Reed nor Bogash knows or cares a great deal about clever boxing. They like to stand up and exchange punches. You will get plenty of action at Col. McKirdy's tournament.

ARMY SQUAD NAMES GARBISCH CAPTAIN

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Cadet E. W. Garbisch, '25, of Washington, Pa., was elected captain of the next year's army eleven. Prior to entering the military academy, Garbisch, who played centre Saturday, attended Washington and Jefferson College, where he was captain of the pigskin battlers. In 1920 he first played centre on the Army eleven, and retained that post the next year. He went to tackle last year and took some of the men he has met here-about.

Bob Sage, Detroit barrister, who meets Jack McClellan of Somerville in the semi-final of ten rounds, is also in town. Sage is also managed by Nate Lewis and is considered one of the best middleweight prospects in the country.

It will be a college night. Malone is a graduate of St. Thomas College of St. Paul. Sage is a graduate of the University of Detroit, while Ward attended Princeton.

A boxer must have brains if he hopes to gain real success in the ring

BOGASH FIGHTS PAL REED ON FRIDAY

With a popular decision over Harry Greb on his belt, Louis Bogash of Bridgeport, will meet Pal Reed, the Fighting Parson of Natick in a 10-round bout at Mechanics Building on Friday night.

Bogash would be champion today if a decision was rendered when he met Champion Greb. He missed by the proverbial eyelash, and at the finish the New Jersey critics unanimously handed the laurels to him.

After Reed's recent showing against Johnny Wilson the fans are strong for him.

Reed, by the way, is the only American middleweight who ever knocked Bogash to the mat. That happened in their first fight and Bogash has never forgotten the incident.

The semi-final will bring together Chick Cavanaugh of Cambridge and Joe Pangrazo of Quincy. They fought at Mechanics Building last month. The decision went to Pangrazo.

In the preliminaries Al Corbett the hard hitting south paw will box Frank Cerra of South Boston.

The opener will bring together Young Dempsey and Jimmy Bones, bantamweight champion of Connecticut.

STEINBORN MAY USE STASIAK ROUGHLY

All wrestlers have different ideas about training. Angelo Tarmasachi, Italian heavyweight, thinks that holding two automobiles in the proper way to show his strength. Today at 12 15 during the noon hour at North square in the North End he was to try to show the public just why some of the grips he gets on an opponent are so deadly and so effective.

Charles Donnell

Should he hold the two automobiles pulling in different directions, he will be the first wrestler to accomplish such a feat.

He is matched to meet Ahmed Sulaymen, the Turkish terror, in one of the all-star matches that Matchmaker Paul Bowser is staging at the Grand Opera House Thanksgiving night.

Stanley Stasiak, mighty Lion of Poland, will be another star to appear on the same card, meeting Mike Steinborn, who is a German Sampson. He clearly demonstrated this fact at the Grand last week when he picked his opponent up almost like a play thing and crashed him to the mat.

He is of the opinion that the big Pole is yellow and he is the man to make him show it. He really believes he can beat Stasiak and beat him quick.

Miss Cora Livingston, World's Champion Lady Wrestler, will be seen in action on the same card meeting Miss Virginia Mercereau, the champion lady wrestler of the West. Charlie Donnell, the Norwood police hero, will appear in a title bout. He will meet Tom Moore, the Atlantic City policeman, for the championship of the Atlantic Coast Jack Albright, the man with the thousand holds, will meet either George Walker, the Canadian champion, or some tough heavyweight to be selected in the next day or so. This tournament should provide action from start to finish.

TOO MUCH FOOTBALL EVIL FOR STUDENTS

Princton, N. J. Nov. 26 (Universal). —There is grave danger that too much football spirit will keep students' minds at the "football" level in after life, Dr. Stewart Patton, psychologist at Princeton University declares.

"The process of making relatively unimportant things seem all-important" he said, "robs students permanently of the ability to judge correctly."

FORBES' VIEWS on FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

Cheerful developments, cheerful views, cheerful news continue to predominate.

As a consequence, the security markets have been rising. On a very large volume of business, representative stocks gained an average of two points during the week and bonds more than held their own, notwithstanding heavy new offerings. • • •

What are the latest developments which have helped to bring about the optimism thus reflected?

Let us deal first with events at home.

Money rates have appreciably declined and the confident expectation now is that easiness will continue for quite some time. The cost of money has a very material influence upon prices for stocks and bonds, and also, as a rule, upon the activities of business and business leaders. • • •

In high financial circles the feeling is that wages are more likely to recede than advance from now on. The Winter months bring more or less unemployment and this season will prove no exception. It is the almost universal verdict that labor has been becoming distinctly more willing, more industrious, more efficient during recent months, a fact of great moment. • • •

Every day brings announcements of increased dividend payments or other favorable dividend action. The final records will probably reveal that more companies have improved their treatment of stockholders during 1923 than during any other peace year in our history.

Cotton's spectacular rise to above 35 cents a pound, the highest point touched since 1920, has attracted nation-wide notice and done not a little to brighten the hopes entertained in the South as to prospects. Instead of 'dear cotton having brought news of curtailed spinning and manufacturing, the newspapers have recorded increased operations at one or two important points. The general disposition at the moment is to dwell upon the beneficial aspects of high cotton prices rather than upon the restrictive effect these high prices may have upon consumption by and by. • • •

Pig iron, often regarded as a trustworthy barometer, has been in decidely better demand during the last week or two. No day passes without bringing announcements of extensive orders for rails and other heavy iron and steel products. Prominence was given during the week to an authoritative estimate that the railroads will have to spend nearly $6,000,000,000 on equipment within the next ten years. • • •

The automobile industry has been astounding the country by its virility and growth. November production is exceeding all previous November records.

The railroads continue to load more than a million cars a week, proving conclusively that business activity of one kind or another is very well maintained. • • •

That Christmas retail trade will be most satisfactory is the unanimous prediction. All classes, it is figured, are in a position and disposed to spend generously this season. • • •

Of course, it would be possible to show that our general business outlook has at least a few phases of more sombre tone, but, as already stated, optimism is the current keynote.

Replies to Investors

(Send inquiries on stocks, bonds or other investment subjects to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor of the Boston American, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass. Don't buy or sell without the benefit of expert advice. Concise stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply. Your inquiry will be held in confidence. We advise with a friendly regard for your personal welfare.)

IT CAN'T GET AWAY.

To S. R. L., Quincy.—Don't ever hesitate to write us and ask our advice before you buy, whenever you feel the least uncertainty,—even if you intend to invest but little money by writing to us. The writer has never believed in too hasty dealings. It is your money you are investing. It is your future. It is your family you are to provide for. Don't let anyone persuade you have to wait a short time to get the facts. Better be safe than sorry.

COLT "A."

To F. W. J., Cambridge.—Colt "A" stock is quoted at the time of dictating this letter at 25½—27. There is not an active market on this stock and we have no idea of cases where the buyer was required to wait quite a little time after he had put in a bid for the stock before he could get in touch with a seller.

Colt's Patent Fire Arms Manufacturing Company was incorporated back in 1855, under the laws of Connecticut. Its present outstanding capitalization amounts to $5,000,000 and the par value of the stock is $25. It has been a very liberal dividend-payer and a complete list of dividends paid and of distributions to stockholders would require pretty nearly a whole sheet of letter paper. Its present regular dividend rate is $2.50 cents a share quarterly, and the latest payment was made October 2 to stock of record September 22.

Stock bought at current price yields almost 8 per cent. The latest report of earnings that has been made public is for the year 1919. The absence of any recent earnings' statement is not significant. People who buy Colt stock are satisfied with the large dividends paid and read pay but scant heed to the earnings behind these dividends, as they have almost invariably been far ahead of dividend requirements.

NEVER A COMPLAINT.

To Marlboro.—It gives us pleasure indeed to have the opportunity of advising you that American Bond Mortgage Company, New York, is well known as any-short institution and we believe that the bonds it offers and sells to the investing public merit confidence. We have never had a complaint from any reader who invested with this company. It has been in business a great many years and always has made good. What we may about American Bond & Mortgage Company we can say regarding Greenebaum Real Estate Mortgage & Bond Company of Chicago. This Greenebaum organization (as a bank) is one of the oldest banking institutions in the West. Its bonds stand well.

You ask if these bonds are a good investment. We have no doubt that they are. But you say that you have only a few hundred dollars to invest. Do you realize that all real estate mortgage bonds are term securities? Do you know you cannot cash in on them until they mature? If you can afford to put your money into these bonds and let it stay put you would find them satisfactory investments, but if you think that there is any danger that you will need to have your money at a moment's notice it would be better for you to buy a high grade bond or stock that is listed on the stock exchange.

To S. H. R., North Attleboro.—L. R. Steel Realty & Development Company stock—preferred and common—is not worth much, but it would be inexact, perhaps, to make the assertion that it was entirely worthless. We have seen recent quotations of 25 cents a share for the common and $1.50 for the preferred. No regularly constituted brokerage house, however, deals in such a flotsam and at best the market is very uncertain. A good many of the dealers who quote prices on such issues are unreliable.

Metropolitan 5 To 50-Cent Stores is not quite as nearly worthless as L. R. Steel, but it is one of the Dubiske promotions that has not made good. In fact, comparatively few of the Dubiske promotions have been successful. Half of them are in receivership.

We really do not think that it will make any difference to you whether you exchange your stock or not. Class "A" common is quoted at $2 and class "B" common at $3. The old common is quoted at $3 and the preferred at $10. These quotations are more nominal than they are exact and a majority of the brokers will probably announce bids on these shares as not members of any exchange and have doubtful ratings.

VARIOUS STOCKS.

To E. C., Newport.—This acknowledges receipt of your letter and we find it somewhat difficult to frame a very definite answer. This is because you have dipped so deeply into mining stocks, and mining stocks never lend themselves very well to satisfying analysis. They cannot be dissected and judged as you would put the yard stick to strictly commercial enterprises. Mining is essentially a hazardous and uncertain business.

Besides, the uncertainty of mining in the recurring rise and fall of the metallic market. Some of the copper companies are not now—nor have they been for four or five years—mining copper at a cost that permits a profit. In other words, copper is too low. Europe, owing to its paper conditions, has not been able recently to serve as a liberal buying patron. But there are signs aplenty that the copper market is improving. If it is a long lane that has no turning.

If the writer himself were hocked up with Utah, with Quincy, and with Arizona Commercial he would hold these stocks and not let go of them at prices so very much less than he paid for them.

Of course, the foregoing observations and suggestions include Nevada Douglas Consolidated Copper stock. This ill-starred company was a promotion of A. J. Oren. The stock is probably worthless. It has a par value of $5. R. L. Day & Company, Boston, sold at auction December, 1921, 1,500 shares at $1.50 for the lot. This is at the rate of one-tenth of one cent a share.

St. Paul Will Earn Charges for First Time in 6 Years

"The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad will earn its interest requirements in full this year for the first time in six years; it will meet every obligation, including interest on its bonded debt, from its own income and without special assistance from its stockholders or any outside source; the road is in the best physical condition in its history; its organization is excellent and its operation efficient, and I see no reason why its financial condition should not show a continuous, steady improvement."—Statement was made today by Harry E. Byram, president of the St. Paul system.

Don't Let That Cold Turn Into "Flu"

Rub on Good Old Musterole!

That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once.

Rub good old Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief.

Colds are merely congestion. Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stir-lates circulation and helps break up the cold.

As effective as the messy old mustard plaster, does the work without blister.

Just rub it on with your fingertips. You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief.

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole. 35c and 65c, in jars and tubes.

MUSTEROLE
WILL NOT BLISTER

Better than a mustard plaster

Red Pepper Rub takes the "ouch" from sore, stiff, aching joints. It cannot help but relieve. It certainly stops that old rheumatism torture at once.

When you are suffering so you can hardly get around, just try Red Pepper Rub and you will have the quickest relief known. Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers. Just as soon as you apply Red Pepper Rub you will feel the tingling heat. In three minutes it's warm and sore spot through and through. Pain and soreness are gone.

TRAVEL BRIEFS
NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL

By BOBBIE SHATTOR

MANY INQUIRIES ABOUT CUBAN TRAVEL

A considerable percentage of the inquiries received in our Hotel and Travel Bureau these days are for information regarding travel to Cuba, its connection with passports the following may be of interest and help:

American citizens going to Cuba are not required to have passports or other papers. Citizens of other countries are required to obtain a sailing permit from the Income Tax Inspector at port of departure from the United States, this permit will be furnished on payment of income tax to the Inspector, or presenting evidence that same has been paid.

ATTRACTIVE RAIL AND WATER ROUTE TO VIRGINIA

Passengers for Old Point Comfort and, Norfolk, Va., will find it possible to combine a rail and boat trip by the use of train to Baltimore, transferring there to the Old Bay Line steamers.

The Baltimore Steam Packet Co. operating this line has recently added two new steamers to their fleet, the "State of Maryland" and the "State of Virginia." These ships are equipped with private baths, running hot and cold water in all staterooms, and exceptional dining facilities. The dining rooms are located on the main decks, overlooking the water, and are noted for the excellence of its cuisine and service.

Special table d'hote dinners are served from 50c to $1.00, and club breakfasts from 30c to $1.00. Special attention is given to meals for children. Steamers leave Baltimore daily at 6:30 p. m.

SUGGESTION FOR WINTER VACATION.

What should make a popular Winter trip would be by rail or boat to New Orleans, stopping there for the Mardi Gras and races, thence by boat across to Havana, a sail of 48 hours, returning from Havana to Key West, thence north by rail through Florida visiting the principal Winter resorts of Florida, Jacksonville, Savannah, or Norfolk, from which points the traveller may avail himself of steamer service to New York or Boston. Or, if preferred, the trip from Havana may be made by water to New York or Boston.

ILLUMINATED STATION NAMES ON RAILROADS.

Commuters whose noses are becoming misshapen through being pressed against train windows, in vain endeavor to get their bearings from the station sign boards, will be pleased to know that illuminated name boards are being perfected that will end their difficulties.

The illumination will be made by lamps directing light upon the board, or the board may be in the form of a frame which can be lit up from behind, the lettering being on opal glass to show white on black or black on white.

Explanations regarding changing trains at various stations may also be shown on these boards.

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK INCREASINGLY POPULAR

A report made by H. H. Runkins, Traffic Manager of the Yosemite Transportation System states that Autumn travel is about 25 per cent. greater than a year ago, and business generally booked and in prospect for the Winter months assures a very satisfactory season.

During the 12 months ending September 30, 1923, 150,642 people entered the park as compared to 100,606 for the previous year.

FRENCH LINE S. S. CO. BOOTH AT HOTEL EXPOSITION

One of the interesting booths at the eighth National Hotel Exposition at Grand Central Palace the past week was that of the French Line S. S. Company.

This will start the tourist season next Spring with three fast express ships, the all burner France, the oil burner France and the Lafayette.

EUROPEAN HOTEL MEN USE CUNARD SHIPS.

The British and Czecho-Slovak delegations of hotel men, who have been in America for the past two weeks touring our Eastern cities and attending the International Hotel Congress in New York, came to America on the Aquitania and will return on a Cunarder.

The Cunard line boasts of the fastest ocean greyhounds in the world, with their ocean greyhounds, the Aquitania, Berengaria and the Mauretania, the world's fastest liner.

For those desiring more leisurely travel there are the Carmania and also the Cunarders New Tyrrhenia and the 20,000 tonners Scythia ,Laconia, Samaria and Franconia.

All of these ships are superlative in the comfort and luxury of their passenger accommodation and the warmth of the British welcome is particularly upon boarding one of these liners.

N. Y. CENTRAL ISSUES "GOING WEST" BOOKLET.

"Going West This Winter" is the title of a new leaflet issued by the New York Central lines. This tells round trip all-round tourist fares from principal stations and is a dictionary of principal side trips, scenic points, National Parks, etc.

The object of the leaflet is to assist tourists in securing the maximum amount of pleasure, sightseeing, with least their western trip, at a minimum of expense.

Copies may be obtained from W. A. Burgess, G. P. A., Boston and

About the Income Tax

And the Neatness With Which It Extracts Cash From Small People

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

Big people say the income tax needs changing. To put such a "terrifically heavy burden on large incomes" discourages enterprise. Men do not want to risk their money building up new enterprises, giving employment, if they must stand all the loss, if LOSS comes, and give up half the profits if PROFIT comes.

There is truth in that, although returns show that the very biggest incomes are practically untaxed. Only one man in the United States declares an income of five million dollars a year. And there are at least two that have incomes of more than ten million dollars a month. That's another story.

This is about the great success with which the income tax reaches men that earn salaries, doctors, lawyers, architects, mining engineers, salesmen, etc.

Take a railroad, mine or big factory, earning huge amounts of money, and a lawyer earning $50,000 a year. If something goes wrong with the railroad, factory or mine machinery, mechanics are called in. Whatever the mechanics charge is deducted from income taxation.

If something goes wrong with the inside machinery of the lawyer and he calls in a DOCTOR, to fix him, so that he can continue earning money for his family, and his government, he is not allowed to deduct from his income what the doctor charges. Why not? What's the difference? Isn't he a money-earning machine, in need of repairs?

Then consider the estimable coal mine owner, who exhales pure, high thoughts on the Newport air, or any other mine owner, living in comfort while miners extract coal or other material from the mine.

Such a mine owner, in reporting his earnings, charges off endless items, wearing out of machinery, which is proper, decreasing value of buildings, which is proper, and then he says to the government, "I can't give you what you think you ought to get, because of 'depletion.'"

What is depletion, do you ask? Why, don't you see, the mine becomes DEPLETED as you take out the coal, iron, gold or copper, and that is depletion. At the end of the year there is less coal or copper in the mine than when the year began. The man's property is becoming less valuable. Therefore government makes an allowance for depletion and collects less income tax.

What about that lawyer or doctor? HIS "mine" is his health, brain, physical energy. The lawyer fights in court, wearing himself out. The doctor is called at all hours, night and day, in all weather. THERE IS DEPLETION.

At any moment the doctor or lawyer may drop dead from heart failure, be run over by an automobile or otherwise made worthless.

Coal mines DON'T DROP DEAD, automobiles don't run over them. The lawyer and the doctor, at the end of every year, worth less than they were before, having lived, studied and worked for thirty years in order to make a living during twenty years, ARE NOT ALLOWED TO CHARGE DEPLETION.

The old doctor of sixty-five cannot go before the tax collectors and say, "Gentlemen, I am an old man. It is true that I am earning a fairly good professional income. But look at me. You can see that no company would insure my life. I have at best a few years before me in which to provide for those that I want to take care of after my death. When you take a large slice of my income you are not really taking INCOME, you are taking PRINCIPAL, my life blood, my body, what little energy there is left of me."

Take the late Levy Mayer of Chicago. It is known among lawyers and judges that he paid the largest income tax of any lawyer in the United States.

He worked with a terrific energy that killed him. He didn't complain, but one day in New York city, when he came on from Chicago to look after the interests of half a dozen clients, then hurried to Washington, then back to Chicago, spending four nights of the week on the sleeping cars and past sixty years of age, he said, "Talk about making an allowance on the income tax for coal mines that are being depleted and for buildings that are worth less than they were, look at me. What allowance do you think ought to be made on this old body, that I am using up as fast as I can?"

Three days later he wrote from Chicago: "If you say anything about that matter of income tax, don't mention me. I have no complaint to make. I can take my medicine. It is a man with a big family, worrying about them, that needs sympathy."

Levy Mayer was dead when his letter was opened. So there is no harm in mentioning his name now.

It is said, earnestly, cheerfully, enthusiastically, by the owners of big incomes that our tax system must be revised. True, it must, but not only as regards big incomes running into millions.

The revision should begin by treating honestly the men whose plant is their brain and body, allowing them to deduct for life insurance on that point, as you allow deductions for fire insurance on a factory, allowing for depreciation and depletion on that plant, the human body, of which the usefulness and activity are definitely limited.

Mr. Stinnes of Germany

First Study the Graveyard

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

Hugo Stinnes of Germany has been shipping REAL money into the United States, many millions, and "proposes to organize a world-wide war on Standard Oil." He isn't defending the "dear peepul" against Standard Oil. He simply wants to get away from the Standard Oil some of Standard Oil's money.

Mr. Stinnes' son is here now, a visiting stranger, and it is the duty of the United States to tell him kindly that the less he fights the Standard Oil the longer he will probably live—financially speaking.

All the money that Mr. Stinnes has John D. Rockefeller, if he chose, could give away, charge it off to income tax and not miss it.

And there's a big financial graveyard full of men that decided to fight Standard Oil.

Study that graveyard, Mr. Stinnes. It will interest you.

HEROINES OF HISTORY

ST. BRIDGET OF IRELAND

By Mark Stuyvesant

IN the second century there ruled in Ireland a great king. His name was Eochad and he was a brother of the famous King Conn of The Hundred Battles.

But no member of this clan was more distinguished than a woman who was a direct descendant of these noble kings. Indeed, in Ireland no name is more revered or honored than is her name. It has been perpetuated by hundreds of loyal Irish men and women who have named their children after this good woman. Her name was Bridget. This woman is sometimes called the "Mary of Ireland," and is familiarly known in history as Saint Bridget.

Bridget's father was a resident of Ulster. It was little thought when this girl baby came to bless his home that she would grow up to be a great woman. Indeed, in those days—for it is thought that Bridget was born about the year 453—there was little opportunity for a woman to gain fame except through being the wife of a great king or a brave soldier.

At first, Bridget decided to live a life of exclusion from the world. She selected a great oak tree, beneath which she built her cell. The place where she prayed and worshipped was called "Kil-dara"—"The Church of the Oak." It was from this chapel that the city of Kildare, which sprang up on that spot, got its name.

From this modest beginning, the Church of Kildare grew to be the largest and most powerful nunnery in all Ireland. It became so important that a bishop was appointed to conduct the services and pontifical offices.

There worked the nuns with their beloved Mother Bridget, but none endured with greater humility or energy than Bridget. She, herself, often tended the cattle in the pastures and tilled the soul with her own willing hands. No service was too lowly for this good woman to perform.

When Bridget died in 523, her remains were placed in the Cathedral Church which she had founded. But in after years her bones were carried to Downpatrick and laid beside those of St. Patrick and St. Columba.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON ASTRONOMY DIAGRAMS

By Garrett P. Serviss.

Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

"Please show by diagram or tell how to construct diagram to show the sun perpendicular on the equator and at an angle of 45 degrees at latitudes 45 degrees north and south, that being the position of the sun at the equinoxes, September 21. Also, please show by diagram how the pole star, which is seen at an angle of 45 degrees at 45 degrees north latitude, can be seen at, or even a few degrees below, the equator. I fail to be able to construct such a diagram. —T. W., New York."

YOU should spur your imagination a little, while keeping it under a stiff rein. It will enable you to make quite easily a simple diagram to serve both of the purposes that you mention. Here is such a diagram, and I advise you first to study it carefully, and then see if you can make a similar one without looking at the original. If you can you will have mastered the principles involved, and after that you will be able to introduce very instructive and interesting variations in the drawing which, without any book, will teach you a great deal about the relations of the earth to the sun.

Central Dot

Note that in the diagram shown the central dot represents the earth, while the circle is a section of the celestial sphere parallel to the earth's axis. The earth is so minute in comparison with the distance of the stars and the sun that, without appreciable error, we may treat it, for our present purpose, as a mere point.

The line N-S represents the earth's axis imagined as extending on both sides to the celestial sphere. N stands for the North Pole and S for the South Pole, both projected on the concave of the heavens. The line E-E, at right angles to the polar axis, shows the equator in like manner extended, in both directions, to the celestial sphere.

Now, imagine an observer placed in latitude 45 degrees north on the earth, which is just half way between the equator and the North Pole. Then Z will represent the position of his zenith, or point exactly overhead. And, since the horizon is always at right angles to the direction of the zenith, our observer's horizon will be represented by the line H-H.

Suppose the sun to be in the celestial sphere exactly in the plane of the equator, in the direction indicated by the arrow. To the observer, whose zenith is Z, the elevation of the sun above the horizon H-H will plainly be 45 degrees, as marked in the diagram. So, while an observer on the equator would see the sun overhead at noon, the other observer at the same moment sees it making an angle of 45 degrees with the horizon.

Next consider an observer situated in latitude 45 degrees south, but on the same meridian circle with the northern observer. Evidently his zenith will correspond with the H at the lower, left hand end of the line representing the northern observer's horizon, while his own horizon will be represented by the line Z-Z, which is the vertical of the other observer; then the zenith of the northern observer lies on the horizon of the southern observer, and vice versa. But inspection shows at a glance that the sun, lying in the equatorial plane, in the direction of the arrow, is 45 degrees above the southern observer's horizon, just as it is the same number of degrees above the other observer's horizon.

Another Meridian

But suppose the southern observer to be not on the same meridian with the northern one, but on exactly the opposite meridian, 180 degrees away, then, as you can see, his zenith would be at Z, and his horizon would lie in the same plane, H-H, as that of the northern observer, but viewed from the opposite side the angular elevation of the sun would still be for him 45 degrees.

For your second question, place the observer anywhere on the equator, and the polar axis, or line N-S, becomes the line of his horizon. Consequently both north and south poles lie on his horizon at diametrically opposite points. If he moves either north or south, one or the other pole sinks below his horizon. But the North Star, being situated more than a degree from the true pole, may at certain times in its revolution be seen from a point slightly below the equator. Atmospheric refraction also tends to lift it above the horizon.

THREE-MINUTE TRIPS

THE SERPENTINE RAILROAD

By Temple Manning.

THE most wonderful railroad in the world is located in Peru, but it is a triumph of American achievement because it was designed and constructed by American engineers. In seven hours it rises from sea level, or practically sea level at Lima, to the tip top of the Andes at Cerro de Pasco, more than sixteen thousand feet above the sea.

Furthermore, this remarkable railroad is standard gauge, and does not contain a cogwheel in its entire system.

The Andes mountains are full of copper, and the Cerro de Pasco mines are among the richest in the world. It was to connect the mines with the sea that this road was built.

In order to preserve a minimum grade the road winds round and round mountain sides until, in one place, you can look down and see five tracks below you at distances of from a quarter of a mile to a half mile. These are tracks you have already traversed in your climb.

The western slopes of the Andes are not particularly picturesque. There is practically no rainfall and no vegetation of any sort—only vast mounds of brown dirt, black rock and yellow clay.

New and Intensely Interesting Serial of a Marriage of an Educated Man to an Untutored Woman

"Nothing much."

'Being nice?"

"Oh, yes," said Laurel brightly. Her mother was terribly anxious for people to be "nice," and Laurel almost as anxious that she should believe them so. "She thought my new hat was ever so pretty," she prevaricated smoothly.

"I bet she didn't guess how little it cost," shrugged Mrs. Dallas.

"Well, I didn't tell her," said Laurel.

When Laurel kissed her mother good-bye on the platform at the station, there wasn't a tear in her eyes, although her mother's pretty cheeks were all smeared with them underneath the concealing big-meshed white veil. The arms she put around her mother's neck didn't cling nor clutch, like the arms that held her so tightly, and her kiss was cool and brief. But in her throat there was a big lump, and about her mouth there was a drawn, set look that meant she was clenching her teeth together hard, as she stood by the car window, and waved and waved to the lovely pink-and-white figure left behind in the smoke.

Behind the Gate

Laurel could always pick out her father in the waiting group behind the gate at the end of the long granolithic walk outside the train in New York, twenty or thirty seconds before he saw her. This was because her eyes were so keen and sharp, while here father was a little near-sighted; and because, too, there was a change in Laurel from year to year, while her father always looked the same.

Laurel and her father were always a little formal and constrained with each other at first. Laurel never could adjust herself quickly to the fact that this distinguished-looking gentleman, with the close-shaven cheeks, little black mustache, and keen gray eyes, was her own father, whom, if he lived at home as other girls' fathers did, she would be familiar enough to climb over, and tug and pull at, perhaps. It took a little while for him, also, she imagined, to believe that she—freckled, long banged, and black—was his.

She seemed perfectly calm and quiet when she put her hand in his, and he leaned and kissed her, but really her heart was beating fearfully.

Inside the taxicab on the way to the hotel, where Laurel and Miss Simpson were to stay, Laurel would sit beside Miss Simpson, and her father would occupy the seat opposite them. Most of the conversation, as they rumbled along, would be between Miss Simpson and her father—about the recent journey, the weather in Boston, the weather here, unimportant subjects, with long lapses of silence between; and upon arriving at the hotel, Laurel's father would leave them at the elevator-door, and go away quickly as if he were glad to escape.

Upstairs in the luxurious three-roomed apartment which he had engaged for Laurel, there would be all sorts of surprises—dolls and elaborate toys, when Laurel was younger; candy and flowers, and a dear little fitted work basket this time, and a pile of brand-new books, lying on the table beside the silk-shaded reading lamp.

Breakfast with Laurel

Laurel's father lived in bachelor's apartments not far away from the hotel. It was easy for him to come in every morning and have breakfast alone with Laurel close beside one of the high windows in the private apartment, while Miss Simpson went downstairs to the dining room. A waiter in black, who treated Laurel as if she were a princess, and her father as if he were a king, would roll in a table with a snowy cloth on it and shining china, with all sorts of delicious smells creeping out from beneath inverted silver bowls.

It would be usually at this first breakfast alone together that the real reunion between Laurel and her father would begin. This time, however, when her father left Laurel at the elevator door, he had told her not to return at 7:30, and they would go to dinner somewhere together, if Miss Simpson would pardon his stealing his little girl away the very first night. So on this visit Laurel's and her father's first real words of greeting took place inside the dusky interior of the taxicab that bore them to the restaurant which he had selected. It was the first time in a whole year that they had been alone together.

They sat in silence for a moment or two, after the door had slammed upon them. Then, "Well, here we are," said Laurel's father.

"Yes," murmured Laurel.

"How are you, Laurel?" he asked.

"All right."

"What sort of a year has it been?"

Her hat gave her a mature look that was unfamiliar

Just the shortest, most conventional questions—just the shortest, most non-committal of answers, but full of significance to them both; full of the promise of the dawning of the old sweet intimacy which never failed to steal over Laurel and her father, once they got rid of preliminaries, and to possess them like sunshine on a cloudless day, once it breaks through the mists and fogs of early morning.

Laurel's father sat away as far as possible from her and surveyed her from top to toe. The close little toque with the red berries gave her a mature look that was unfamiliar. He sighed.

"You're growing up, Lollie," he said gently.

Whenever Laurel's father called her Lollie, it always brought the vision of her mother sharply before her eyes. Her mother and father were the only two people in the world who had ever called her the silly little baby-name of Lollie —"Lollipops" once it had been. She shoved the vision away as soon as possible. It hurt somehow. Her mother would have so loved the lights outside the taxicab window, and the taxicab too. She and her mother seldom afforded a taxicab.

"It's my new hat that makes me look up," said Laurel with never a reference to the creator of it. Laurel never mentioned her mother to her father. Some fine instinct within her kept her lips as sealed as his. "Don't you like it?" she inquired, a little wistfully, for her father was still gazing at her with a sort of abstracted look which she didn't comprehend.

"What? The hat? Oh, yes. I like the hat very much," he assured her. "It's very nice, and your suit, too. I like your suit, Laurel. Only you're growing up, and I don't know that I like that. I don't suppose I shall dare kiss you many years longer in the station before people," he laughed. "Young ladies don't like being kissed in public, I'm told."

Laurel laughed, too—a nervous, pleased little laugh, and moved a little nearer.

"I've finished all the readins," she confided to him proudly.

"You don't mean all of it!"

"Yes, every book you put on the list," she announced, eyes shining.

"Good work, Laurel."

"Oh, it wasn't work. I love to read."

"Do you really?"

Likes to Read

"I didn't used to so much. It just seemed to come this year—liking it so, I mean." She turned her face towards him. "When you read a book you like a lot," she went on, "do you try to stop between sentences and look around and think it over, like eating a piece of candy just as slowly as you can, so it will last longer?"

"It used to be like that," he smiled, and he reached over and put his hand over Laurel's. "I'm glad you like to read, Laurel," he said. "For I like to too. I've hoped you'd like to read when you grew up."

Laurel looked down at her father's hand, and then quickly out of the window, as if not to frighten it away.

"Isn't it funny how many things there are that you like that I like too?" she said softly. "I was counting them up coming down on the train."

"Are there? Tell me. What?"

"Well—there's books, and woods, and camping, and dogs, and horses, and fall better than spring, and dark meat better than light, and roast beef better than chicken, and salad better than dessert, and —and—"

"Yes, go on," her father encouraged.

"Well picture galleries, and Madame Butterfly, and that Mrs. Morrison, and—"

"That Mrs. Morrison!" her father interrupted.

"Yes. Don't you remember last year one afternoon at tea?"

"I supposed you'd forgotten all about Mrs. Morrison."

"I haven't," said Laurel.

"You saw her for only about a half an hour."

"I know it. But you know what you said beforehand?"

"What did I say?"

"Why, for me to notice her, and listen to her nice voice, for she was somebody you'd like me to grow up to be like."

"Did I say that?"

Laurel nodded.

"And you did really like her?"

"Oh, yes! She was ever so nice to me! She gave me a little silver pencil out of her bag."

Unable to Go

"And she has invited you to spend a few days with her during this visit of yours, at her Summer home on Long Island."

Laurel was silent a moment.

"Will you be there?" she inquired.

"I'm sorry. I can't. I've got to be away. That is why she has invited you, so you won't be lonely here in New York. I must be in Chicago for a few days next week on business. I don't like missing even a day of your visit, but it's necessary."

"I wouldn't mind just staying at the hotel with Miss Simpson."

"Why, I thought you said you liked Mrs. Morrison."

"I do—only—I'm used to hotels. I'm not lonely in them. I don't believe I should like visiting. Has Mrs. Morrison any children?"

"Oh, yes. Several. You'll have a splendid time."

"I think I'd rather stay at the hotel," said Laurel.

"Well we'll see. Don't have to decide tonight. It's only for a few days anyhow. We're going to have our two weeks together in the woods just the same."

What Is the Effect Upon the Two and Especially Upon Their Strange and Beautiful Child Laurel?

WHO SAID IT AND WHERE

"You cannot teach an old dog new tricks."

Many a man has excused his unwillingness to try in these words of an old proverb that comes originally from the German.

"My country is the world and my religion is to do good."

Thomas Paine's platform in "Rights of Man" is surely broad and comprehensive.

"A man is but what he knoweth."

Wrote Lord Bacon in his essay, "In Praise of Knowledge."

"Let our object be our country, our whole country and nothing but our country."

This paraphrase of the old legal form of oaths was used with telling effect by Daniel Webster in his speech at the laying of the cornerstone of Bunker Hill Monument in 1825.

"Truth sits on the lips of dying men."

Whoa death is near, men have no time for falsehood, said Matthew Arnold (1822-1888) in Sohrab and Rustum."

"Spheres of influence."

This much used phrase is a version of "Spheres of Action" employed by Earl Granville in a letter to Count Munster, April 29, 1885.

WAYS OF A HUSBAND

SEQUEL TO "WHEN A GIRL MARRIES"

By Ann Lisle

Ann Lisle

"DON'T be a goose," I cried impatiently. "Jim is none the worse for his accident. This morning he came to him self and, though he is too weak to be annoyed by excitable and mistaken friends, he isn't in a bit of danger. A few days of absolute quiet and Jim will be back to work. A nerve strain or shock now might do more damage than the original blow."

"You are no much like the look of the logic," sneered Rosa.

"You make me be," I replied coldly. "You want to go racing back there with a display of emotion which would do Jim untold damage. If your friendship amounts to anything you'll go ahead to the office and keep affairs in order. Don't make over how anxious you are about Jim unless you mean it."

"How dare you!" Rosa gasped.

In this moment I decided that I had gone too far. But I had been goaded to an expression of my true feelings and I felt that I couldn't back down, so I said calmly:

"You asked me a lot of questions, and you got an answer to most of them. We are two business women. I count on your common sense to make you realize that in any sickness it is the good of the patient that counts and not the desires and emotions of well-meaning friends. No one is any good to Jim now but the nurse and doctor. And you and I belong at our desks."

There was a note of whimpering in Rosa's voice as she switched off suddenly.

"This time maybe it is all right I shall be left out. You are left out, too, and that is for once all right. But all the time, when there are parties, are you going to console yourself with somebody else?"

"I don't know what you mean, I" I uneasily.

"Who I mean, it is—I mean Ralph Lacey. Some one drove you from Dreamwold or wherever it is you were for visit Virginia it was not. Pat it was not. The gallant Raffaello it was. I think. Well, you have him for to do the console. But me, I am just—left out. And I am not used to being left out. Why aren't I invited to the parties where Jamie all the time goes? Is it that I am not so attractive as that pole for the beans, Miss Gregory?"

"You've asked so many questions," I parried. "Which do you want me to answer?"

Rosa turned and looked at me shrewdly.

"You have answer," she said with malicious enjoyment.

As Rosa Cordova and I sped along in the swaying taxi, which was carrying us from Ruth Gregory's cottage to the city, I realized that Rosa's visit hadn't been entirely wasted from her point of view.

She had managed to find out all about Jim's accident and the way I was summoned to his side. But to a woman of her nature this was probably nothing as compared to the satisfaction she had found in telling me that she knew it was Ralph who had driven me to Miss Gregory's house.

With Rosa Cordova and Virginia Dalton, each so satisfied in her own way over the importance of Ralph Lacey's friendship as a factor in my life, I found myself growing dizzily conscious that it wasn't likely to be easy to go on taking Ralph for granted in the good old simple way. Rosa seemed content with silence now that she'd shot her arrow. And I was satisfied not to have any further discussion with her, though I recognized the fact that my own thoughts weren't likely to be very pleasant companions either.

In the silence I sat and wondered how Jennie and Miss Gregory were getting on. Everything Virginia had said to me yesterday at Dreamwold came back to worry me. I was in a state of grave agitation by the time we drove up to my office to which Rosa positively insisted on taking me. We got there

SECRETS OF HEALTH

FARMER'S WIFE'S HEALTH

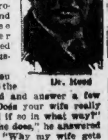
By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.

HE came in with his wife.

She was a pale, wiry, energetic little woman, who entered my consultation room with something of a limp and put her hand to her back as she sat down. After interrogating and otherwise studying her case, I turned to the husband.



Dr. Reed

"I wish you would take the witness stand and answer a few questions. Does your wife really help you and if so in what way?"

"You bet she does," he answered with pride. "Why my wife gets up at 5 o'clock, lights the kitchen fire, puts on the teakettle, starts the breakfast, milks two of the cows and serves the morning meal."

"Go on. That's only the beginning of the day."

"Well, of course, she clears away the breakfast things, washes the dishes and begins to get ready for dinner. She makes the beds and sweeps the house while the things are cooking."

"And what about the afternoon and evening?"

"Oh, that's some more dish washing and cooking and dish-washing. She generally helps at the milking."

"Where's the well?"

"Down half way to the barn, only 'bout three hundred feet from the kitchen."

"Good pump?"

"No, a windlass."

"Where's the woodpile?"

"Out in the back yard, only about two hundred feet away."

"Then she helps out with some other things, doesn't she?"

"Then she looks after the children, patches their clothes, gets them ready for school, nurses them when they are sick?"

"Oh, yes, she naturally does everything that's woman's work."

"Or that can be heaped on her. Now, Mr. Farmer, you are in for a little tongue lashing. I happen to know a good deal about you and I know of a lot more about farmers' wives. I've had occasion to doctor a lot of them. They're overworked, practically killed by doing a lot of things that they ought not to do. Now here's your wife, whom you permit to do a lot of drudgery, such as drawing water from the well, carrying in wood, milking cows and washing —things for which she ought to have help.

"But we can't get help any more in the house or on the farm."

"Why not buy some electric power from the company that has its wires strung right in front of your door, and use it for separating the milk, or churning or doing the washing. Or get in gasoline or steam power or some other kind of power. Why, you treat your horses and cattle better than you treat your wife."

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When the bride is dressed in white and wears a veil should the groom wear a full dress suit when married at church in the morning?

(2) Should the bridesmaids wear long silk gloves, with sleeveless dresses?

(3) When the father gives the bride away should he ride with her in the first machine, and who else should ride in that machine?

(4) On what side of the church should the bride's and groom's folks be?

L. O.

NO, a full dress suit must not be worn before six o'clock in the evening. The formal clothes that are proper for a morning church wedding are the morning (cutaway) coat and dark gray-striped trousers. The only substitute for these formal clothes is the dark blue or black business clothes.

2. Yes, long silk gloves may be worn. The more formal gloves are kid or suede.

3. Yes, the best form is to the bride and her father to come to church together. No one else should ride with them.

4. The left-hand side of the church is always considered the bride's side; the right-hand, the bridegroom's. The parents of the bride sit in the first pew on the left, the parents of the bride, groom sit in the first pew on the right.

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

MANY manufacturers are always improving the different household utensils to make the work easier for the woman around the home. The latest improvement is a carpet sweeper with four wheels.

THEY are electrically driven. A man usually runs down to the office, so why should his wife walk to and from her work?

THESE carpet sweepers come in open and closed models in case a woman wanted to hire a chauffeur to drive it for her.

If you've got an expensive car in the garage, you wouldn't want a cheap looking machine in the house.

ANOTHER new invention is a washing machine which does your laundry work and plays phonograph records at the same time.

THE manufacturers are working on a tea kettle which will not only sing, but will hum grand opera.

AS soon as they leave the factory they'll go to Chicago to be trained by Mary Garden or Geraldine Farrar.

IN a couple of years we won't think anything of seeing rich society women taking their tea kettles to the Metropolitan Opera House.

THEN they'll bing them home, fill them with water, set them on the gas stove and expect them to warble anything from "La Boheme" to "Cavalleria Rusticana."

BUT this is asking too much of of a good, old-fashioned grandaddy tea kettle.

NEXT thing we know, the manufacturers will be trying to get coffee percolators to whistle.

AND you don't want to be surprised if they make gate-leg tables that do a clog dance.

NEW-fangled ideas are okay, but the average woman is perfectly satisfied with the old-time dust rag and dish cloth.

HELP THE OTHER FELLOW WHEN YOU CAN'T WIN YOURSELF

When you find out that a certain person is going to do a certain thing, instead of immediately trying to out-do that one by trying the same thing yourself, why do you not co-operate, and together, get bigger and better results?

Is it because you cannot bear to have any one but yourself get the credit for accomplishing?

If you find that you cannot carry through a project that you have started, and there seems to be hopes of another carrying out a similar plan, why not get behind the other fellow and boost?

Why be the one who always adds the word which turns the tide against the good thing that another is fostering?

Be a good sport when you see you cannot win, and help the other fellow.
